The Restless Dollar
12,000 Against the Tick
Another Leonardo
For Sherlock Holmes

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

MIAMI, FLA., Nov. 24—Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale knows about political economy and says the plans and policies of President Roosevelt "are substantially right." Which is a good thing for a professor to say. The professor is pleased because President Roosevelt is seeking "stabilization" of the dollar, and quotes the President's message to the London conference last July:

"The United States of America seeks the kind of a dollar which, a generation hence, will have the same purchasing power and debt-paying power as the dollar we hope to attain in the near future."

Of course President Roosevelt did not literally mean that any dollar could have, a generation hence, the same purchasing power as it has now. Values and purchasing power depend on price of human labor. You could build pyramids at low cost when workers got nothing but lashes and enough corn and water to keep them alive.

If the five or four-day week, and the working day of seven or six hours, goes through with increased wages, the dollar cannot possibly buy, a generation hence, what it buys now.

If our depression lasts a generation, which Heaven forbid, the dollar would buy more than at present. There was a time when you could buy a goose for two pence, a sheep for twice the price, an ox for two or three shillings.

Nobody can stabilize the dollar's value, except by saying that it will be exchanged for so much gold, and that doesn't mean much.

One man's meat is another's poison. Cigar manufacturers tell NRA that on raising wages in the cigar industry will make the five-cent cigar impossible. The code would pay 28 cents an hour to makers of cigars by hand, 32 cents for operators of machines that make cigars. That does not seem excessive. Some one will continue the five-cent cigar.

The Department of Agriculture will put 12,000 men to work, on "tick eradication." The "tick," improperly called sometimes the Texas tick, attaches itself to cattle in the field, hangs on for life, drinking the animal's blood. "Ticky" cattle are thin, miserable, scrawny and almost worthless.

The remedy is to dip afflicted animals in a liquid that destroys ticks and then keep them away from infected animals. The poor tick will not put up much of a fight against Uncle Sam, for when it falls off a cow, it can walk only a few inches and must wait until another animal stands still while it climbs up.

Mosquitoes drink the blood of human beings, annoy them, and in addition plant malaria germs in their systems. The tick at least does not do that. It is satisfied to eat. It is pleasing to know that $4,500,000 will be spent by the government "to eradicate malaria," which presumably means wiping out mosquitoes in Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Missouri, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

An unfortunately neglected rain barrel can start a new mosquito plague, and although mosquitoes cannot fly far, wind sometimes carries them, and railroad trains and automobiles take them everywhere.

Prof. J. D. Paulson, of North Carolina State College, graduate of Yale's school of fine arts, says the supposed Botticelli "adoration of the kings" is really Leonardo Da Vinci's painting of "The Birth of Christ." The supposed Botticelli, formerly owned by the Soviet government, was purchased by an American private citizen, who remains anonymous.

If the supposed Botticelli turns out to be a Leonardo, the anonymous owner has bought a great bargain. No price could be put on such a painting by Leonardo, although he himself attached little importance to his paintings. Applying to an African ruler for a job, he told in detail how he could build bridges, highways, fortifications, machines for besieging cities and added casually, "If it

SHOE WORKERS ORDERED TO TAKE 25 P. C. PAY CUT

By decree of the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration more than 15,000 shoeworkers in Boston, Lynn, Chelsea and Stoneham were ordered to take a 25 per cent reduction in pay today. The decision ended a battle that started last August. Union officials said the decision is to run for 60 days on trial but he forecast a protest of workers at the end of that time.

GIRL, TWO PILOTS, KILLED IN PLANE CRASH

Wedron, Ill., Nov. 24 (AP)—Two men and a girl, crew of an eight-passenger air liner bound for Kansas City, were killed today when the plane crashed on a farm near here. They were Miss Hazel Goodman, Kansas City, stewardess; Pilot R. W. Godall, Chicago; co-Pilot Boyd Grover, Chicago.

MRS. BLENKHORN FREED IN SOMMER DEATH

Dist.-Atty. Warren L. Bishop, by a nol pros, today freed Mrs. Marion Blenkhorn of Everett who had been held in $50,000 bail, double surety, as an accessory after the murder of Adolph Sommer, aged Cambridge inventor. Insufficient evidence was the reason given. She was arrested with James Deshler and Marshall Bowles when they were charged with the holdup slaying.

FAY SAYS RUDY SEEKS DIVORCE

New York, Nov. 24 (INS)—Rudy Vallee is seeking a Mexican divorce from Fay Webb, his estranged wife, she charged today, so that he may marry a pretty blues singer. Fay did not name the singer but for months the crooner has been attentive to Alice Faye.

Pretty Girls Lead Grads to Boston for Big Game

By PEGGY DOYLE

By train, by plane, by steamship and over the wide New England roads, the influx into Boston began today for the old and perennially new gridiron conflict between the crimson of Harvard and the blue of Yale.

Predictions of perfect weather for the greatest of football classics doubly assures a typical response to the attraction, which has grown rather than dwindled with the years.

The hotels are filling up. The Harvard campus is thronged. Tea is being poured in a deluge to rival Niagara, and, in fact, countless incidents with a "kick" are preceding the kick-off.

Railroads report, on the basis of reservations, a typical pre-depression traffic. To accommodate people from Ne wYork and vicinity, who will attend the Harvard-Yale game in the Stadium tomorrow afternoon, the liner Saint John of the Eastern Steamship lines will make a sailing from Boston at 11 o'clock tomorrow night, arriving in Boston Sunday at 2 p. m. The Saint John is expected to bring probably 500 potential Stadium occupants this afternoon.

At the hotels reservations are already in, and many are filled to capacity. As for tickets to the historic get-together, they just ain't, unless you'll take a pair in the rear of the goal posts.

Of course, the major social event is the Harvard-Yale ball at the Copley-Plaza tonight.

To keep the ultra-marine and ne ples crimson, little metal bracelets have been devised and will be given only to those who have paid for their tickets. In previous years the college lads have been far too ingenious about splitting, duplicating and, in rare instances, counterfeiting cardboard tickets—and so the metal bracelet inspiration.

HOUSE LIQUOR VOTE NEAR

With approximately 45 amendments to the proposed liquor bill before it, the house today adopted a motion to bring the matter to a vote. The motion was offered by Rep. Victor Jewett, of Lowell.

The most far-reaching proposal to come before the session today probably was an amendment offered by Rep. Martin Hayes, of Brighton.

This would instruct the secretary of state to place the question of taverns on the ballots for the April pre-primary convention, thus virtually making a question of local option.

Previously the house had passed a separate bill which would allow local option votes in the 19 cities hoding elections next month.

The bill was then sent back to the Senate for approval of an amendment by Rep. John Jones of Peabody, the amendment being designed merely to add a paragraph

Fake Rum License "Fixers" Mulct Applicants

By JAMES J. SMITH

Copyright, 1933, for the Boston Evening American.

Applicants for licenses to sell bottled liquors in Boston are paying thousands of dollars in a shakedown racket, the Boston Evening American learned today.

In many cases they are being approached with a demand for $500 if they want their applications "fixed," and in many cases they have paid.

They have paid to one of two men who are calling on them, one posing as an inspector for the Boston licensing board, the other posing as the representative of a well-known Boston politician who is represented to the applicant as possessing influence with the board.

2500 SEEK LICENSES.

Some 2500 applications for liquor licenses have been taken out since Tuesday, when the license board first began issuing the papers, and since then about 500 of these have been filled out and filed.

The shakedown has been in progress for several weeks, however. A list of those who would probably seek licenses was not difficult to obtain; it includes proprietors of most of the places already selling beer.

The first step in the racket in each case has been a call on the prospective seller by the man representing himself as an inspector for the licensing board. He inspects the place of business where, in most cases, beer is already being sold, and he learns definitely whether the proprietor is in the market for a hard liquor license.

DEMANDS $500 FEE

Then he discusses the difficulties the applicant may face and remarks that there are many people willing to pay big money in order to get a license which, of course, is the truth.

A short time later the second man calls at the same place. He says he understands the proprietor wants a hard liquor license and

$2,754,755 STOCK LOSS CHARGED

Improper Influence Is Cited in the Suit Against 11 Trustees

Thirteen shareholders in the $20,000,000 Old Colony Trust Associates filed a bill in equity in Suffolk Superior Court today demanding from 11 trustees an accounting of $2,754,755 losses through allegedly improper transactions.

The trustees, it is claimed, were improperly influenced to buy stock in the First National Bank, of Boston, before its depreciation on the exchange, and also bought up shares of their own trust and cancelled them for the benefit of the sellers with a $600,000 loss to the trust's shareholders.

The defendant trustees ar Gordon Abbott, Francis S. Hart, Philip Stockton, T. Jefferson Coolidge, Edwin R. Marshall, F. Winchester Denio, Benjamin W. Guernsey, Philip Dexter, Frederic C. Dumaine, Robert F. Herrick and John F. Aldred.

Kenneth Shaw Usher and Damon E. Hall, as executors of the estate of Samuel Usher, and 12 other owners of shares, brought the bill which asks for an accounting of all monies, securities and assets of the Old Colony Trust Associates but particularly sums paid for shares of the trust itself, for shares of the First National Bank, for shares of the Everett Trust Co., and for a loan to the Everett Trust Co.

Old Colony Trust Associates was organized in 1926 so the Old Colony Trust Co. could get control of other banks, but this was prohibited by Massachusetts statutes, the bill states. At the time it was formed 400,000 shares of stock were issued and sold to the public for $20,103,533. Stock was purchased in about a score of bank and trust companies.

In 1930, it is alleged, certain holders of stock of the First National Bank "improperly influenced the trustees" to buy 20,000 of the bank's shares at $118 a share, at a total cost of $2,360,000.

This purchase was not in the open market, it was alleged, but from the stockholders who were given the privilege of repurchasing 7500 shares at $123 and 7500 at $128. There was no power to compel repurchase.

'Shot to Save Professional Honor,' Doctor Declares

Chicago, Nov. 24 (INS)—The alleged confession of Dr. Alice Lindsay Winekoop was made public today by Capt. John Siege and Dr. Harry Hoffman of the Cook County behavior clinic follows:

"On the 21-st of November, about 1:30 or 2 o'clock in the afternoon, Rhea decided she would go to the loop and buy some music.

"She went down to my surgical chamber to weigh herself when she changed her clothing. I went down there with her. When she had removed her clothing I told her to get up on the table and let me examine her side.

GIRL "PASSED OUT"

"She got on the table and I got a bottle of chloroform and began massaging her side with it. Since this particular portion of her body was sensitive to pain, I suggested that she take enough chloroform to deaden her senses. This she agreed to do.

"I continued massaging her side for about 25 minutes. At the end of this period I noticed that she seemed to be passing out. After a hasty examination I decided the girl was dead. I was stunned. My entire past and future flashed before me. I realized my career was at stake.

"Suddenly I remembered there was a gun in the room. In a flash I decided to make it appear as though the irl had been murdered in a robbery. Seizing the gun from the drawer, I held the muzzle within five inches of her skin, and pressed the trigger.

WAS TERROR-STRICKEN

"When the shot was fired I nearly fainted from the sudden noise. I can't explain why I did it other than the fact I was terror-stricken to discover that Rheta had died from the chloroform. I'm sarry.

"When I recovered my senses I realized that something would have to be done. I placed the gun near Rheta's head and ran and got a blanket from another room in the basement, using it to wrap the body.

"After I had wrapped the body up I started to run upstairs. Suddenly my mnid cleared and I thought I could make the whole thnig look like a robbery. I went back and wiped the fingerprints off the gun and opened the basement door to make it look as though someone had come in that way.

STOLE OWN MONEY

"Then I went into the office and stole my own $6 out of the desk. Afterward I went upstairs and got my coat and hat and left the house. Going over to Madison st., I walked up and down for a long time; it seemed like hours."

Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop, 62, Chicago physician, who confessed today she was responsible for the death of her daughter-in-law, Rheta Gardner Wynekoop. "I gave her chloroform to ease her. It killed her . . . I was frightened. I feared for my professional honor, so I shot her to make it look like robbery," she told police. Earlier she had wailed: "My poor son! He has confessed to save me. He couldn't have killed her. He was out of town." (International News Photos.)

'I SHOT HER AFTER SHE DIED' SAYS DOCTOR

Chicago, Nov. 24—Sixty-two-year-old Mrs. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop today confessed the "mercy slaying" of her beautiful young daughter-in-law in the tragic "operating table" mystery.

A slip of the tongue, in which the woman physician unguardedly admitted she was present when the young girl disrobed, brought the crime to its solution.

"Pleas from her son, Earle, husband of the victim, brought about the confession of his mother.

If you did it, mother, please confess!" police declared the young man implored.

Young Wynekoop had made what police first called and then denied a partial confession. It was this that led to his mother's break.

It was only a few moments after that the physician confessed she had committed the crime.

SHOT IN SLEEP

In her confession Dr. Wynekoop said she fired a bullet into the heart of her daughter-in-law while the girl lay unconscious.

Breaking down at last after nearly three days of exhausting examination, the woman physician acknowledged that she had administered chloroform to her son's 23-year-old wife, in examining her for a pelvic pain of which the girl had complained.

She had gone to her surgical office in the basement of her Monroe st. house last Tuesday afternoon to find Rheta partly undressed, weighing herself.

Rheta complained of severe pains, Dr. Wynekoop said, and she placed the young woman on her operating table and began to administer chloroform to ease the pain and facilitate examination.

Dr. Wynekoop told Capt. Stege she kept asking Rheta if she could feel the pain and that her daughter-in-law continued to answer af-

'HAIL HITLER' TO MEET JEERS

Because David K. Niles, director of Ford Hall Forum, Ashburton pl. and Bowdoin st., has refused to cancel the speaking engagement of Prof. F. Schoennemann, alleged Nazi representative, the John Reed Club of Boston has called for a counter demonstration outside the hall at 7 p. m. Sunday evening. Jewish veterans groups have indicated that they will join the radical artists in the curbstone protest meeting.

Winthrop Girl Dies After Dash to Catch Train

Tardiness at breakfast, and then a sprint to catch her train in order that she would not be late at a Boston secretarial school cost the life of a 19-year-old Winthrop girl student today.

Ruth Tewksbury, of 39 Edgehill rd., Winthrop, died in the arms of a chum, Beatrice Strasburger, 24 Brookfield rd., Winthrop, in the East Boston terminal of the Narrow Gauge railroad in view of hundreds of commuters. Heart failure, brought on apparently by running for the train, caused her death.

The girls customarily met each morning at the Ingalls station. Miss Tewksbury was late this morning and Miss Strasburger, from her seat in the train saw her running towards the station just before the train began to move. Miss Tewksbury just caught the last car.

They met in the terminal and Miss Tewksbury complained of feeling faint. She collapsed in her chum's arms and was dead on arrival at the East Boston relief station.

Reilly, of Villanova Grid Fame, Is Dead

Waterbury, Ct., Nov. 24 (AP)—William John Reilly, former football player of Villanova College, Villanova, Pa., died late last night after a brief illness. He was 24 years old.

Reilly was graduated from Mt. St. Mary's Academy, Emmitsburg, Md., in 1928, and from Villanova College in 1932. He was a student at Jefferson medical school in Philadelphia when he became ill.

ROOSEVELT AND MORGENTHAU PLAN MONETARY BATTLE

Gen. Johnson, NRA Chief, Also Confers With President, Who Ignores Critics of His Gold Buying Policy

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 24 (INS)—Calm in the face of fiery criticism of his monetary policies, President Roosevelt today prepared for the first of a series of important conferences with his acting secretary of the treasury, Henry Morgenthau, Jr.

Morgenthau was to arrive here about 11 a. m. from Atlanta. He left Washington last night, arrived in Atlanta this morning, and was to motor over to Warm Springs.

The visit of the Treasury head was held to be of tremendous importance, despite assertions here that he had nothing specific to take up with the President. An old-time monetary battle is developing in the nation's capital, and Mr. Roosevelt wants the latest report possible on the situation. Morgenthau, who is accompanied by Mrs. Morgenthau, will stay here several days.

CHANGE IN SCHEDULE

One of the important factors in the Treasury chief's call here lay in the fact that he planned his arrival for today. Before the President left Washington Morgenthau revealed that he intended coming down here for Thanksgiving dinner. Thanksgiving is a week off. And long before that time, Morgenthau will have gone.

Mr. Roosevelt was standing pat on his monetary policies and ignoring criticism of his gold buying recovery plan from several sources, not the least of them being the advisory council to the Federal Reserve Board.

Nevertheless, it was no secret that he intended going over the monetary situation, comprehensively and in detail, with the Treasury Department head.

There will be extensive discussion between Mr. Roosevelt and Morgenthau for the possible increased use of silver. Whether any decision to take action in that direction will develop from the scheduled conferences was, however, a matter of doubt here.

ACTION ON SILVER

Dispatches from the capital, closely scanned by the President and his party, disclosed that Senator Key Pitman (D.) of Nevada, leader of the congressional silver bloc, was confident the executive would do somthing to help the silver market. On the basis of Pitman's stand and the apparent importance attached to Morgenthau's visit it was generally inferred that such action might be the next step in the closely guarded fiscal program of the President.

Recovery Administrator Hugh S Johnson was another visitor at the "Little White House" today. Johnson arrived early, fresh from an address he delivered last night in Atlanta.

Mr. Roosevelt, in his press conference, emphasized that his real purpose in summoning Johnson here was to provide the NRA chief with "24 hours of real rest." Nevertheless, the President said he would go over with Johnson any code matters the recovery administrator wanted to discuss.

NRA Foes 'Corporals of Disaster,' Says Johnson

The NRA chief in an address last night voiced the conviction that the Roosevelt policies have lifted the nation "25 per cent out of the depths of the depression" and that compared with conditions early last spring "we are a fortunate people."

Johnson called foes of the recovery plan "A few little men with lou voices frantically waving puny red flags of false and futile warning in the path of a resistless advance of a great people."

"Away, slight men!" he cried. "You may have been leaders once. You are corporals of disaster now."

He declared that criticism of President Roosevelt because he was spending too much was the "silliest, ghastliest criticism that has yet appeared."

"If we can spend $42,000,000,000 for the privilege of competing in a remote European shindig that affected our people not one tithe as much as this lethal blight has affected them," he said, "then we surely can spend more billions to fight back this curse of humanity if it scrapes the bottom of the box."

Death in Fire Under Probe

Fire-swept ruins of the home of Mrs. Lillian B. Anderson, 33, in West Cumberland, Me., were being searched today for evidence that may turn her death into a murder. Inquiry was opened after her bones had been found scattered in the ruins.

ARREST LOOMS IN CAPE DEATH

Barnstable, Nov. 24—New evidence will be presented next week when police and court officials will resume the inquest, begun last January, on the Franklin L. Bearse "hi-jack" murder.

The continuance of the inquest, which was originally opened last Jan. 7, is an unusual move in view of the fact that two grand jury inquiries into the killing have been completed without any indictments being returned.

The decision to convene the inquest again is being interpreted here as indication that several arrests might result in connection with the slaying of the Osterville man in a hi-jacking battle near Hyannis last December.

Lynn Man Faces Heart Balm Suit

An attachment of $25,000 in the registry of deeds at Salem was said by attorneys for Michael Adler, former Lynn shoe manufacturer, to be the forerunner of a suit for alienation of affections against Samuel Benjamin, Lynn merchant.

Mrs. Adler, mother of two children, and Benjamin were arrested by Lynn police last February in a raid on a Baltimore st. apartment.

FIN. COM. AIRS TILE WAR

The Boston finance commission has taken under advisement the question of the $166,000 contract awarded by the city for tiling the East Boston traffic tunnel. They will study technical reports on the matter before making a decision and final report.

A public hearing held on the relative merits of tile and terra cotta for tiling the tunnel developed into a bitter two-hour row between more than 20 experts. Frequent clashes between City Councillor Clement A. Norton and Col. Thomas F. Sullivan, chairman of the transit commission, enlivened the hearing.

Norton protested that the contract specifications called for a standard title and that the transit commission accepted terra cotta. Col. Sullivan, however, claimed the contract called for a ceramic or clay material and that the terra cotta complied with the specifications.

Hollywood Cold to Lee Tracy After Ban

Hollywood, Nov. 24 (US)—Lee Tracy can expect nothing but cold silence from officials of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios and no relenting on the cancellation of his contract for offense to Mexican cadets when he returns here.

This became clear today when studio officials stated that as far as they are concerned the Tracy episode is a "closed matter" and that no negotiations will be entered into with the star to effect his return to M.-G.-M. employment.

The officials stated Tracy's dismissal was based upon the "morality clause" of his five-year contract, of which he had served but seven months.

Stamp Forgery Plot Nipped in St. John's

St. John's, Newfoundland, Nov. 24—F. P. Fearn is under arrest here charged with wholesale forgery of Newfoundland's $4.50 airmail stamps—the most costly ever issuel here—which were used for carriage of letters on the eastward flight of General Italo Balbo's Italian armada.

4 Rescued Over Ladders at Fire in Melrose

Three women and a man were rescued over ladders and a dozen others groped through smoke to safety today when fire damaged a store and tenement block near the Wyoming railroad station in Melrose.

The rescues were witnessed by more than 2500 passengers who were delayed half an hour on five trains, when firemen were forced to stretch hose lines across the tracks.

A crew of laddermen, in command of Fire Captain William J. Riley, first carried Mrs. Sadie Bishop over the ladder and then returned for Mrs. Mary Burke and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Simpson. All were trapped in the tenement section of the building overhead the street floor stores.

The blaze started in the basement of a chain store in the Brigy block, West Wyoming ave. and Hurd sts., a flatiron shaped building.

Seven children were included in those who groped through smoke to reach the street. Five were the children of Mr. and Mrs. John Duffy and the other two in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Sulkins, occupants of the top floor.

Spectators were treated to an added thrill when firemen of Engine 1 lowered a collie dog on a rope from the top floor.

Four of the delayed trains were Boston bound, one from Wakefield, another from Reading, one from Amesbury and the train from Dover, N. H. A train en route to Lawrence was delayed on the outbound track.

Fire Chief Frank E. Newman said the blaze started from spontaneous combustion. He estimated damage at $2500.

6 Grilled in Maine Death Mystery as Police Hint Love Triangle

Portland, Me., Nov. 24—Information which further confirmed their theory of murder was given today to detectives investigating the mystery death of Mrs. Lillian B. Anderson, 33, in West Cumberland.

According to Fred Emery, neighbor and the last person known to have seen her alive, the burning of her home early yesterday could not have been an accident because she remarked to him on the night before that she had had no fire all day.

Emery also pointed out that the house was not wired for electric lights and that Mrs. Anderson probably did not tip over an oil lamp because she told him when she went into the house at midnight that she was going right to bed, as she had to get up early and prepare for her husband's homecoming.

The fire was discovered three hours after Emery had accompanied her home to see that she got to the house with her car, which was working badly.

BODY IN CELLAR

Another fact that leaned investigators toward the murder theory is that Mrs. Anderson's fire-charred body was found in the cellar, but not at a spot beneath her bedroom, where she would have fallen had she been trapped in bed when the floor burned through.

Dr. Mortimer Warren, Portland pathologist, had the remains of the young wife today, examining them for possible bullet wounds and examining the neck in an attempt to learn if the head had been hacked off.

The head was found five feet away from the rest of the body, under some charred debris in the cellar.

Six persons, among them Emery, were questioned today in the case, and at the same time detectives were hunting a mill executive from Oxford County, declared by Emery in a previous questioning to have been in Mrs. Anderson's home only six hours before the fire.

HUSBAND HINTS SURPRISE

Mrs. Anderson declared, Emery said, that the mill man had left at 9 p. m., after a three-hour visit, announcing he had to go to Boston. At 10:40 a. m. yesterday, however, less than eight hours after the fire, he was reported to have been seen in an automobile with another man and a woman, looking at the ruins.

Emery's statement was made a short time before investigators began questioning the dead woman's husband, Harold D. Anderson, 50, a seaman, who hastened to Portland from Boston yesterday after arriving in Boston on a collier.

"I can't talk to you about this now," said Anderson to newspapermen just before his questioning, "but when I get through talking with Mr. Tapley (Walter M. Tapley, Jr., county attorney), I may have something to say that will surprise you."

INVOLVES MILL MAN

Emery said he was convinced that the death of Mrs. Anderson, daughter of a retired executive of the United Railway Co. of Baltimore, was not an accident.

"I have some information that I shall give to the county attorney but which I can't discuss now," he said. "Miss Anderson came to my home shortly after [illegible] o'clock and told me her car wasn't running properly. She wanted to know if I would give her a lift up to the Libby home in Gray. She said she wanted to find out if her brother had come home from his hunting trip.

"We went up there but the house was in darkness and she suggested that we drive to two other houses. No one was home there, or at least the lights were out, and we came back to my house.

"She told me that the mill man had been to her house; that he had come about 6 o'clock that night and had left for Boston at 9 o'clock.

NO FIRE IN HOUSE

"At 12 o'clock she said: 'I must go home now. You follow me down and see that I get in all right with the car. My husband is coming home tomorrow and I must get up early and have the place arranged. I have a lot of work to do.'

"She was all right when I left her and I waited outside until she lit the lights in the house. I wouldn't go into her home at that hour of the night.

"The next thing I heard was early in the morning when I was told that there was a fire down the road and I rushed down and found it was her house. I'm sure she would have had time to get out if she had been all right—and another peculiar thought in my mind is that, if I remember correctly, she spoke of not having any fire in thehouse that day, because it had been a warm day.

"If she had had a fire in the house, it would have burned out by the time she got home because we use nothing but wood here and that burns out in two hours at the most."

U. S. CONSUL IN AIR CRASH

Shanghai, Nov. 24 (AP)—Countess Carlisle, niece of Sir Miles Lampson, British minister to China, was reported seriously injured in an airplane crash on Chusan Island, northeast of Ningpo today. No one was killed.

Lincoln Reynolds, Viola, Calif., American vice-consul to Foochow, was said to have been slightly injured.

The plane, owned by Pacific American Airways, a Chinese concern owned jointly by the Chinese government and Pan-American Airways, was reported carrying seven passengers and two pilots, one of whom was understood to be George Rumill, an American.

Yale Denies Angell Plans Retirement

New Haven, Ct., Nov. 24—Officers of Yale University deny reports that President James Rowland Angell will retire in 1935, and that Dr. Seymour, provost of the university, probably will succeed him.

President Angell could not be reached for confirmation or denial of the report. He will not reach his 68th birthday, at which retirement from Yale is compulsory, until May 8, 1937.

$85,082,200 IN NEW JOBS LIST

Washington, Nov. 24 (AP)—The Public Works Administration today allotted $85,082,200 for 38 non-federal projects in all parts of the country which officials said would provide 30,145 man months of quick, direct employment.

Twenty-six of the projects received grants of 30 per cent of the cost of labor and materials, representing a gift of the federal government and the remainder as a loan to be repaid with interest at 4 per cent.

Allotments for Massachusetts included: Newton, loan and grant, school building, $148,800; Foxborough, loan and grant, buildings, $294,000; Belchertown, loan and grant, buildings, $98,000; Monson, loan and grant, steam lines, $100,000; Norfolk, loans and grants, buildings, $146,000; boiler equipment, $35,000; state of Massachusetts, loan and grant, dormitories at the Canton School for Crippled Children, $115,000.

In Love Tragedy

EDWARD COTE

MRS. COTE

Edward Cote, 20, of Worcester, and his 17-year-old bride, Viola, who died today from shots fired by him yesterday, say the police. She had deserted him.

BRIDE, 17, SLAIN BY HUSBAND SHE SPURNED

Worcester Couple Had Parted One Week After Wedding

Worcester, Nov. 24—Mrs. Viola Cote, 17, bride of five weeks, shot three times by her husband, Edward, last night, died today at City Hospital and shortly afterward Cote admitted his guilt in court.

The 20-year-old husband was not permitted, however, to plead guilty. He was held without bail on a charge of murder.

It was revealed that he had made an appointment for today to arrange with a lawyer to sue for annulment of the marriage.

But instead he practiced shooting yesterday afternoon, then sought his young bride at her mother's home and fatally wounded her.

After that, he intended to surrender to police but first went home to hear the radio news broadcast in which he learned officially that they were searching for him.

THREAT BEFORE WEDDING

As he picked up his hat and coat to start for the police station, officers, informed by relatives that he was living at a Front st. lodging house, walked in and arrested him.

Jealousy of admirers that he believed Mrs. Cote had before her marriage is believed to have been the cause, but her mother, Mrs. Pearl Myott of Wall st., said he had even threatened her with death, during their brief courtship, if she did not consent to wed him.

Mrs. Cote, it is said, was to have become a mother.

The couple met Sept. 30 and were married Oct. 18. She left him shortly afterward and went home to her mother.

SEEKS TO PLEAD GUILTY

Cote's lawyer, Maurice Splaine, pleaded not guilty for him but the defendant spoke up, saying:

"No, I plead guilty. I don't want to drag my family through this.

But the court let the not guilty plea stand.

Atty. Jacob A. Boldberg said he had had an appointment with Cote and his mother to sign papers in an annulment suit.

Cote went to the Myott home last night accompanied by another man whose name the authorities have been unable to learn. Cote is silent on this point.

He drove Mrs. Myott away at the point of the gun and as his bride fled, opened fire, three shots striking her and one going wild into the wall. She continued into the street and collapsed in a pool of blood.

Savant Fights Plea of Wife in Divorce

Salem, Nov. 24—Prof. John G. Thompson, Ph. D., thrice-married expert on child psychology, does not intend to sit quietly back and allow his latest bride, the former Miss Katherine Rogers, Rockport society girl, to divorce him.

His counsel filed an appearance in the Registry of Probate for Dr. Thompson, said to be living in Boston. Judge Harry R. Dow impounded the papers in the case when former U. S. Atty. Frederick H. Tarr brought the original divorce action.

'A Feller's Found a Friend'

NEW HINCKLEY CLUE SOUGHT

With a report they "didn't get a great deal of information," State Detective Richard J. Griffin and Police Chief Louis Holbrook of Holliston, returned from a New Hampshire C. C. C. camp today after questioning a man on the "insurance murder" of John M. Hinckley, Holliston choreman.

The man questioned, they said, was a former Holliston resident, whom they learned had been responsible for a phone call that opened an investigation into the death of Hinckley at Saugus last July.

Hinckley had been buried in a pauper's grave as a hit-and-run victim until the investigation disclosed he had been heavily insured just before his death. The body was turned over to Medical Examiner George Burgess Magrath last week.

Detective Griffin reported by phone to Asst. Dist. Atty. Charles Green of Essex County that the trip failed to gain much information, but he planned to confer later with Green, Dist. Atty. Cregg and Chief Holbrook, he said.

Schools Closed by Scarlet Fever Rage

East Bridgewater, Nov. 24—Schools and libraries were closed here today as the scarlet fever epidemic was reported spreading rapidly. Supt. James G. Reardon ordered the closing of the schools, and the trustees of the libraries followed suit with a two weeks' closing order.

RUSSELL AIDS INJURED BOY

Sixteen-year-old Joe Galvin of Cambridge, who will be Mayor Richard M. Russell's guest tomorrow at the Harvard-Yale game, will realize two ambitions at one and the same time. He'll see the game and he'll see the mayor.

For it developed today that Joe has never seen the host who is going to reward him for nine weeks of suffering with a broken leg sustained during a scrub game in which he was trying to prove the Rindge Tech coach wrong for having cut him from the squad.

"I've never seen him, but I know he's a great feller," Joe said today at his home, 3 Rindge ter. "I've always wanted to see him. He's not only a great feller, but a swell guy. And I guess there isn't anything I'd rather see than the game."

Knives From White House Rafters to Be Yule Gifts

Washington, Nov. 24 (AP) — Already the Christmas spirit is abroad in the White House, brought breezily in by Miss Nancy Cook, furniture-fashioning partner of Mrs. Roosevelt.

From discarded White House rafters, she's carving exquisite paper knives, and making President Roosevelt's own gift "to order" as usual.

This year it's to be a hang-on-the-wall bookcase to hold seventy five rare miniature volumes, part of his collection. In past years he has had tables and chests of Miss Cook's making.

Last year, and the year before, Mrs. Hoover had Christmas gifts of carved boxes and book-ends made of the wood taken from the White House when the Coolidges remodeled the roof. She wrote a poem to accompany the gifts, explaining their origin.

Miss Cook has added metal work to the wood-carving idea, making possible on her paper knives an engraved plaque which says: "This wood was part of the White House roof, erected about 1817 and removed in 1927."

VISION STOPS DEATH HAND OF PLOTTER

2 Held in $10,000 Insurance Murder Conspiracy at Athol

Athol, Nov. 24—James Jolly, 55, wealthy South Royalston farmer and widower, was alive today, police said, because his slayer's hand was twice stayed by a vision of his own murdered mother.

According to a confession by Arthur A. Shaw, 51, of Lincoln st., Worcester, he was hired to kill Jolly for $10,000 insurance, by Alton W. Corliss, 49, of Phillipston.

TIP FOILED PLOT

Shaw and Corliss were held in $10,000 bonds each for the grand jury, after they pleaded guilty in local court to conspiracy to murder the elderly farmer.

The amazing story which reads like something from the Middle Ages, came to light as a result of a "tip" received by State Trooper George S. Pollard at the Petersham Barracks.

His informant said Corliss had previously tried to hire him to kill Jolly, and only a few days ago had told him that he had finally found a man to carry through his plans.

Police moved swiftly, nipping the plot just in time, as last night had been set as the time for another attempt on Jolly's life.

FIRE TO HIDE EVIDENCE

Shaw, a steam roller operator for the state department of public works, broke down and confessed after being arrested in West Boylston. He said that last March Corliss offered him $200 to murder Jolly, on whose life Corliss held a $5000 policy with double indemnity for accidental death.

The plan, according to Shaw, was to slay Jolly and then set fire to his house to cover the evidence of the killing. Accepting a $10 advance payment, Shaw said he went to the Jolly farm under pretext of purchasing a horse.

He said he was about to brain the farmer with a heavy horseshoe when a vision of Shaw's mother appeared, wearing an expression of horror. Mrs. Shaw was slain 20 years ago in Amherst by her husband, who then blew himself to pieces with a stick of dynamite.

VISION APPEARED AGAIN

Badly shaken Shaw said he mumbled excuses and left the farm. A month ago Corliss again persuaded him to attempt the murder, he told police. This time the plan was to lie in wait for the farmer and murder him as he went to water his cattle after dark.

With a heavy club in his hands, Shaw said he hid behind a shed but again a vision of his murdered mother appeared, and again he lacked the will to go through with his plan.

Shaw said he then made up his mind to have nothing more to do with the murder and informed Corliss of his decision.

COAKLEY FACES NEW GRILL IN BAR PLEA

Renews Battle for Reinstatement This Afternoon

Daniel H. Coakley's battle to obtain reinstatement to the bar was was resumed this afternoon with the petitioner again under cross-examination by Robert G. Dodge, president of the Boston Bar Association.

If the hearing is not concluded by tomorrow afternoon, it will probably go over for at least a week because of other engagements of Judge Fred T. Field.

ROARS REPLIES

Coakley, who while pleading for reinstatement was mild-mannered almost to the point of humility, lost his temper under the sharp questioning of the suave Dodge and occasionally roared his replies.

He denied it was knowledge that the so-called confession of William J. Corcoran had been made, which caused the decision on the night of Jan. 19, 1922, to put in no defense in the trial of Dist.-Atty. Joseph C. Pelletier.

Coakley said Senator James A. Reed, senior counsel for Pelletier, who was removed from office, had advised that his client rest his case because he believed no case had been made out against him. Also he said there were other reasons in no way connected with the "confession."

Corcoran, former district attorney of Middlesex County, later repudiated the "confession" which he said was an attempt to injure Pelletier and Coakley.

FOLEY ENDORSES PLEA

Coakley admitted he did not contest his disbarment in Federal court, because after his disbarment in the state courts, automatic action followed in the Federal tribunals.

A letter from Dist. Atty. William J. Foley "unreservedly" recommending Coakley's readmission was read. Another from Rev. Phillip J. O'Donnell rector of St. James Church, said he had known Coakley for 50 years, and that "many poor men and women who have been helped" by the petitioner joined in praying for his reinstatement.

LINDYS REACH CANARY ISLE.

Lisbon, Nov. 24 (INS)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh landed at Las Palmas on the Canary Islands, after a non-stop flight from Ponta Delgada, the Azores, at 4 p.m. today (11 a.m. E.S.T.)

The Lindberghs flew first to the Madeira Islands, circling over the harbor of Funchal before continuing on to the Canary Islands. They covered a distance of approximately 900 miles in seven hours.

The Canary Islands are on the route used by German fliers in crossing from Europe to South America.

Should Col. Lindbergh decide to continue over this route, he would probably fly next to the Cape Verde Islands and from there to Senegal, on the west coast of Africa.

You can see Barbara Holmes daily from 9 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. at the new free rental bureau on the fourth floor of the R. H. White Co.

Blames Public

NEEDHAM PLANS MORE POLICE

The present menace of crime and the need for a properly trained and equipped police force were detailed by Gen. Daniel Needham, commissioner of public safety, to members of the Motor Truck Club of Massachusetts in a meeting at the Chamber of Commerce.

Needham, declaring that citizens are becoming too passive about the growth of crime, painted a vivid picture of what might be expected unless steps were taken to curb criminal activities and racketeering.

Allen J. Wilson, New England representative of the trucking industry code, explained the manner in which the code was drafted at Washington. He admitted there were some features which did not please him but that he was willing to forget these in the interests of harmony.

U. S. Sets Gold Price at $33.76, Fourth Day

Washington, Nov. 24 (AP)—A price of $33.76 an ounce for RFC purchases of domestic newly-mined gold was established for the fourth time today.

At London it was $33.48 on a basis of sterling opening at $5.31 to the pound.

USE OF ENTIRE $2,500,000 IS PROPOSED

BULLETIN

The CWA board today approved additional Boston projects aggregating $1,157,614, bringing the total already sanctioned to $2,116,780 and the total jobs created to 5586. In addition, Mayor Curley obtained the board's tacit approval of his $1,500,000 Strandway project to employ 1500 men providing he gets a city order for $300,000 for materials.

Another project for employing 5000 more men in development of the airport to include Governor's Island is a probability.

Additional Boston projects will be submitted to the State Civil Works board today as the city's first group of men to be put to work under the program start their second day of employment here.

A total of 250 men, drawn equally from the welfare rolls and the lists of those who have not been receiving aid, went to work on Boston projects yesterday at the same time that thousands of unemployed men throughout the State started working on approved projects in various communities.

A grant of $2,500,000 has been tentatively allotted to Boston and already the Civil Works Board has approved projects totalling about $950,000 for the city. Mayor Curley will present additional projects for using the remainder of the allotment today.

The civil works board has also taken another step to fill up the quota allotted to Massachusetts by grants to state departments. This will take care of funds, which local communities feel they cannot handle, even though the grant is given to them by the government.

It was announced the State Department of Agriculture had been allotted $313,734 to provide jobs for 1699 men and that a grant of $221,408 to give work to 1080 men had been assigned to the Metropolitan District Commission. A total of $2,000,000 will probably go to the state.

It was also revealed that a total of $4,088,127 had been allotted to the cities and towns of the State

FIRE NEAR FILM STARS' HOMES

Los Angeles, Nov. 24—The brush fire in foothills northwest of Los Angeles roared on today completely out of control. It crossed the ridge into thickly-populated Earl Canyon and was headed toward the Arroyo Seco, source of Pasadena's water supply.

Earl Canyon estates include those of Mae Marsh, actress, and Victor McLaglen, actor.

A number of houses in Tujunga were destroyed when the flames ate their way into the northern section of that city. Some estimates by fire officials place the number at 150.

The county fire warden's office placed the damage today at $4,000,000 mostly resulting to loss of valuable watershed land.

Approximately 1000 men are fighting the fire which has swept an area 25 miles in circumference.

Forest Fire Sweeps -:- On Estates of Wealthy

Remarkable air view of the fierce brush and forest fire which spread toward scores of fashionable estates of millionaires and film notables in the rich La Crescenta district, Los Angeles, Cal. Approximately 1000 acres of the timberland have been burned and an estimated value of more than a million dollars damage was reported to have been done.

HART KIDNAPER FOILED IN DASH FOR FREEDOM

San Jose, Cal., Nov. 24—Renewed threats of lynching the kidnapers and slayers of Brooke Hart, 22-year-old son of a wealthy department store owner, rumbled through San Jose today.

Reports were flashed to the chief of police and Sheriff William J. Emig that "a vigilante committee of 100 responsible young business men" was being formed.

Sheriff Emig immediately posted additional deputy sheriffs on guard at the ancient county jail.

The confessed slayers, Jack Holmes and Harold Thurmond, cowered in fear in their cells as they watched deputy sheriffs take shotguns from the racks.

A heavy guard already had been posted following a desperate attempt by Holmes to escape from the officers who had the prisoners in charge while enroute from the San Francisco city jail to San Jose.

Complaining of a bad cough, Holmes asked that the window of the car be closed so that he would be out of the draught. An officer changed seats with him to make him more comfortable. Suddenly Holmes made a wild plunge for the door, seeking to wrench the handle of the door open, but the handcuffs he wore bit into his flesh, and, screaming with pain, he sank back into his seat.

As the hunt for Hart's body entered the seventh day a fleet of small boats were searching the bay waters near Yerba Island on a report that a man's body has been seen floating there.

E. J. Dunavant, of Berkeley, told police he sighted the body while working on a bridge caisson early today and that he was "positive he saw the face."

Aged Doctor Parried Questions With Ease Before Her Slip

Priscilla Wittl, 23, "the red-headed beauty" who admits Earle Wynekoop made mad love to her and spent hours in her company. "I didn't know he was married," she said as he was arrested in the murder of his wife. Today yet another girl, a blonde, entered the case as Wynekoop's "fiancee." (Intl. News Photo.)

Chicago, Nov. 24 (AP)—Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop, the 62-year-old physician held in connection with the murder of her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Rheta Wynekoop, wore out nine investigators today in a six-hour questioning of the slaying, and they finally turned to a lie detector to check her story.

It was not until her second questioning of the afternoon that she inadvertently admitted being present when the girl was undressed. This slip was the break that led to her confession of the killing.

From 10 o'clock last night until 4 o'clock this morning questions were shot at her by police, criminologists, college professors, and through it all she maintained the calm that has marked her demeanor since the crime was discovered Tuesday night.

Dr. Clarence A. Neymann, associate professor of mental diseases at Northwestern University, emerged from the conference room of the Fillmore st, police station where she is being held with the statement that Dr. Wynekoop is a "straightforward, staunch and strong-willed person."

"Mentally," the professor said, "she shows no effect of age and parries questions with ease. Things which at first seemed to her disadvantage, she turns to her own advantage."

He said he would classify her as a "strong type of New England woman, who conveys impressions with candor" and that in his opinion there was no question of sanity involved.

"She is both legally and medically sane," he said, "and a very clever and astute woman."

Of the son, Earle Wynekoop, husband of Rheta, Dr. Neymann said he was not weak willed, "but has not the same mental force that his mother has."

DETECTOR ON HAND

The order for the lie detector was sent to the Northwestern University crime detention department and within a few minutes it was brought to the station. It has been used successfully in a number of cases in breaking down defenses of persons accused of crime.

Stoically, and without the slightest change in her professional calm, Dr. Wynekoop stood her ground as police questioned her for information to solve the "operating table murder" of her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Rheta Wynekoop.

As told by the police, Dr. Wynekoop was asked the point-blank question as to whether she had slain the 23-year-old talented musician in the 16-room mansion on W. Monroe St. last Tuesday, and her reply, the investigators said was:

"Absolutely not."

During the examination, which began late last night and continued into the early morning hours, Police Captain John Stege was quoted as asking Dr. Wynekoop if she administered chloroform to her daughter-in-law "for treatment or for any other purpose." Without hesitation, whatever, Dr. Wynekoop replied:

"No, I did not."

The question concerning the chloroform was answered after a coroner's chemist reported he had found such an anaesthetic in the slain woman's body.

At the examination were three alienists engaged by Coroner Frank Walsh. They were Dr. Harry A. Hoffman, director of the criminal court behavior clinic; Dr. Clarence A. Neymann, associate professor of psychiatry at Northwestern University, and Dr. John Favill, associate professor nervous diseases at Rush Medical School.

Apparently unable to learn anything to aid them the investigators turned to the "lie detector" for help, but its extended use was not resorted to because Dr. Wynekoop is suffering from high blood pressure.

Although she was ordered held by coroners' officials last night the police said no formal charge of murder would be placed against her unless and until legal steps are taken to free her.

GRILLING HALTS

Meanwhile Assistant State's Attorney John Long, who assisted in the questioning, announced before the investigation was temporarily halted shortly before 6 a. m. that he would recommend that the inquest, previously adjourned, be reopened immediately for presentation of additional evidence.

As temporary halt was called in the questioning, Dr. Wynekoop emerged from the inquiry room, apparently showing no signs of fatigue. She was then taken to another police station. Going down the station steps, a policeman took hold of her arm, and said:

"You don't need to do that; I'm not trying to run away."

firmatively. Finally, the physician explained, Rheta lost consciousness and for 25 minutes she tried strenuously to revive her.

"THEN I SHOT"

When she realized she was losing ground, Dr. Alice said, she became panic-stricken.

"All the events of my life flashed through my mind," Dr. Wynekoop was quoted, "and I thought of a pistol in an adjoining room."

Fearful of blame for killing the girl with the anaesthetic, she said she obtained the pistol and, holding it five inches from the bare back of the unconscious girl, fired a single shot. That shot penetrated the shoulder blade and passed through Rheta's heart.

Capt. Stege placed the time of the killing between 2:30 and 3 p. m., (Central Standard Time) Tuesday, at a time when Dr. Wynekoop had said previously she was absent from the 16-room mansion.

Inadvertently, it was said, Dr. Wynekoop admitted that she had been in the operating room of her gloomy hospital at the time Rheta had disrobed to weigh. When the body was discovered it was attired only in a slip which had been pulled down to the waist.

After her son, Earle, had been led away this morning following a long grilling by police of both himself and mother, Dr. Wynekoop was left alone in the private office of Captain Duffy with Asst. State's Atty. Long. Long was washing his hands at a washbowl. The aged physician was sitting in an opposite corner of the room.

HOW SHE "BROKE"

Suddenly the assistant prosecutor turned and said:

"For God's sake, doctor, why don't you tell what happened in that operating room?"

For the first time during the many hours she had been questioned, the "woman of stone" seemed startled and upset. But she merely said:

"I can't tell you."

Long went about his washing for a minute and then suddenly said:

"You know you seized the chloroform bottle when you had Rheta on the operating table, that she struggled with you and you gave her an overdose by mistake—and then you shot her."

Dr. Wynekoop appeared panic-stricken. Long, who has the rare ability to burst into tears at will, started to cry. Sobbing, he approached the doctor and gently took her hand. She trembled and said:

"How could I explain?"

"You could beat the case if it was an accident."

"I-I-I-I didn't kill Rheta."

That was all. Then Dr. Wynekoop, her lips just a thin, red line, became silent.

Capt. Stege then took over the questioning and then inadvertently the doctor admitted that she was in the operating room when Rheta was undressing.

"SHE WAS DEAD!"

Stege then pressed Dr. Wynekoop and said she ebgan to talk.

He said:

"Dr. Wynekoop said Rheba was going to go downtown to get some music. On account of being in ill health, she generally disrobed herself and went into the basement to Dr. Wynekoop's office where there was a scale, to be weighed.

"She came downstairs and undressed herself and got on the scale to weigh. Dr. Wynekoop said she had been complaining of having a pain in the right side.

"Dr. Wynekoop said: 'Get on the operating table and I'll see if I can't help that pain of yours along.' She put some chloroform on the spot and gave Rheta a few sniffs of it. The pain was very great and Dr. Wynekoop said she was in the habit of giving Rheta chloroform when she treated it.

"After giving the annesthetic to Rheta, she noticed that the pupils of her eyes were dilated and she was completely passing out. She felt the pulse and found there was no life in her and she tried to revive her for 25 minutes.

WIPES GUN CLEAN

"Knowing that her medical career would be jeopardized by such a thing happening in her own household, she thought quickly and went over to the drawer of her desk and got the .32 caliber revolver and fired one shot, five inches away from the body as she lay on the operating table.

"She then went over and got a blanket and laid it over Rheta after getting a piece of gauze, carefully wrapping the gun and wiping off the fingerprints.

"She then went upstairs and put on her hat and coat and went out of the house and walked up and down Madison st. for about 45 minutes. She set the time of the actual killing at 4 o'clock in the afternoon."

That was all of Stege's statement.

For the first time since the mysterious killing Dr. Alice and her son, Earle, had met in the police quarters where both had been subjected to night-long questioning, separately. Near the breaking point but always protesting his innocence, the 28-year-old widower had said he knew of a motive and wanted to see his mother.

BEGS HER TO CONFESS

On her shoulder he sobbed a plea that sh eadmit her guilt if she had done it because of her great love for him.

Looking solemnly into his reddened eyes, she said, "I didn't do it."

Earle had told the police his wife had been termed by a physician "slightly deranged," and that she had put iron filings and drugs in food at their home.

After their two-hour meeting, Earle had been led away to lunch. Then began the final questioning that resulted in the doctor's statement, with which Police Capt. Stege still professed to be unsatisfied.

Stege said he had found a blood-stained blanket in the house and had concealed this discovery from Dr. Alice.

Capt. Stege asserted that the large amount of blood soaked into the blanket led him to disbelieve that Rheta had ben chloroformed before she was shot, and that physicians had sustained his theory.

"GIVE HER THE LIMIT"

When Burdine H. Gardner, father of the slain woman, was informed of the mother-in-law's statement, he said:

"All I can say is, give her the limit."

The coroner's inquest was reconvened at 1:30 p. m. (Central standard time) to hear the new evidence.

Earlier excited police officials had told reporters that Earle had made a "partial confession" and

And Santa Claus is here to greet all good little boys and girls!

Every little boy and girl in New England, if they have been real good, can come in to see Santa Claus, in person, and whisper in his ear just exactly what they want for Christmas. Old Saint Nick will be in Houghton's Toyland from now until Christmas. Just have mother or dad come with you.

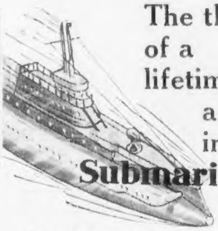
The trained monkeys from the Manchester Zoo will give performances every half hour!

They'll swing around the trapeze, zip through the air . . . eat, sleep, drink just the same as you do, play, wrestle, in fact they do everything but talk; and of course they're well dressed in the latest of fashions for they have more than a jungle education. You'll want to see them perform two or three times . . . but be sure and bring the kiddies in.

Be sure to bring the children into toyland. There's many a treat in store for them . . and loads and loads of new toys to play with.

See the little trainer of the monkeys . . . only 36″ tall

A real live midget makes the monkeys behave for you. He's no taller than a yard stick, yet the monkeys do exactly as he wants them to do.



The thrill of a lifetime... a ride in a Submarine!

J. P. Morgan Forgets Cares of World for Eye Test

Baltimore, Nov. 24 (US)—J. Pierpont Morgan arrived in Baltimore to have his eyes examined by Dr. William H. Wilmer, at the Wilmer Institute, Johns Hopkins Hospital. The banker was in genial mood. His Harvard classmate and lifelong friend, Morris Whitridge, met him at Pennsylvania Station and the pair flung themselves into each other's arms.

Mr. Morgan was all affability to reporters and photographers. He said:

"You will excuse me, I hope, if I say I cannot talk about finance or politics at this time. Yes, you may say I am, in general, confident."

He said that as soon as his eyes had been taken care of he was going to the Susquehanna flats, near Havre de Grace, for two days of duck hunting.

Chuckled Mr. Morgan:

"You see, if I expect to get any ducks, my eyes must be right."

'HUMAN TORCH' IN REAL BLAZE

Albany, Ore., Nov. 24—For years Matthew Harcourt has earned his living as a "human torch." He saturates his clothes in gasoline, ignites it and dives from a tower into a pool of water. Never has he been burned.

He was driving his truck near here, when he discovered the interior was ablaze. He put out the flames, then had to be taken to the hospital for treatment of his burns.

MALDEN VOTES HOSPITAL AID

Raising $1300 in cash at its mass meeting, with pledges for additional sums, Malden citizens voted to conduct a house-to-house canvass for funds for the Malden hospital. To insure its continued operation $25,000 is needed.

The new hospital opened a year ago but because of improved equipment and facilities, it is found necessary to have a much larger budget to carry on its work than in former years. The hospital was erected by public subscription.

Herbert B. Swope Trapped in Elevator 48 Minutes

New York, Nov. 24 (AP)—Herbert Bayard Swope, friend of the President and former executive editor of the New York World, was trapped for 48 minutes yesterday in an elevator of the Chase National Bank Building.

Others in the car were Gerhard M. Dahl, chairman of the Brooklyn Manhattan Transit Co., the elevator operator and two women.

The elevator slipped a cog or something in its descent from the 32nd floor, but was stopped by its safety catch 20 feet below the fifteenth floor.

The operator opened the door onto a blank wall. He telephoned the main floor then assured his passengers they would be released in 5 minutes, but it was 48 before another elevator was brought alongside. The passengers were passed through special side doors, stepping three feet over a yawning abyss.

Taken safely to the ground floor, they were greeted by a reception committee of building officials who extended congratulations for their heroism.

The end of the workday came and Swope repaired to a washroom in his own office building. He washed his hands and turned to go.

The door was locked.

NURSE FREED IN BANKER DEATH

Santa Cruz, Calif., Nov. 24—Acquitted of a murder charge, Frieda Wilhelmina Weltz was free here today to seek again the health and happiness she claims were shattered by the man she was accused of slaying, Francis J. M. Grace, retired capitalist.

The 43-year-old nurse, a veteran of the world war, was acquitted last night by a jury, whose foreman and only woman member Mrs. Ruby Enemark, embraced her after the verdict was read.

"I never had any doubt as to what our verdict would be," Mrs. Enemark said, "but I was surprised it took so long."

Grace, 58, and a nephew of the late W. R. Grace, founder of the shipping and commission concern, was fatally shot in the garden of his Santa Cruz summer home September 9. Miss Weltz, apparently in a daze, was taken into custody a few minutes later and charged with slaying the man she had formerly nursed.

Navy Officers Sent to Submarine Base

Washington, Nov. 24—The Navy Department has announced the transfer of Lieut. Earle C. Hawk, junior grade, from the U. S. S. Sicard, and Ensign Karl R. Wheland from the U. S. S. New York, to the submarine base at New London, Conn. Both will be assigned as instructors.

SLOAN PLEDGES MOTORS' FAITH

A movietone address by Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors Corp., opened a special program of sound pictures showing development of the industry, in Bradford Hotel Ballroom today for General Motors dealers, their organizations and families.

The special showing was one of a series in 65 key cities of the United States. It was the first time in recent years local dealers have been brought together.

Mr. Sloan urged all to regard General Motors Silver Anniversary, now observed, as occasion for affirming faith in the future, to which he dedicated the Corporation's 25 years of experience.

"We are living in an era characterized by swift movements, social as well as economic," said Mr. Sloan. "We must strive to keep our products ad our policies attuned to changing conditions. We must strive to keep both an open mind and an open heart."

POLICE GUARD STRIKE ZONE

Augmented police details were on duty today at the plant of the Winslow Brothers & Smith Tannery at Norwood, fearful of outbreaks by strikers because of the importation of private guards by the plant management.

The private guards, who first took up a position at Endicott and Walpole sts., were ordered to remain on the company's property by police, after strikers had appealed to Chief William H. Sullivan.

Said to have been brought here from New York, the guards aided the company officials when 300 strikers received pay due them. Armed with clubs they admitted strikers to the grounds in groups of 25 and escorted them to the gates after receiving their money.

Lewis Breaks Neck of Wrestling Foe

Camden, N. J., Nov. 25—Stanley Pinto, heavyweight wrestler from Ravena, Neb., is in a hospital here after a bout with Ed (Strangler) Lewis and physicians fear his neck may be broken.

Lewis threw Pinto last night in the first of a scheduled two-out-of-three fall match and the Nebraskan was unable to continue.

In his dressing room Pinto collapsed and was taken to a hospital. He revived and went to his hotel, but later was found unconscious in his room, being again rushed to the hospital.

Physicians said they planned an X-ray examination of his cervical vetebrae today.

Hull Greeted at Rio, Will Meet President

Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 24 (INS)—Cordell Hull, American Secretary of State, arrived here today en route to Montevideo for next month's Pan-American conference. He received a hearty welcome, tendered by a delegation from the Brazilian Government and leaders of the American colony here.

Hull, before leaving for Sao Paulo, tonight was to have luncheon at the American embassy with Mello Franco, Brazilian Foreign Minister, and an audience with President Getulio Vargas.

5 Thugs Get $20,000 in Pawnshop Theft

Parkersburg, W. Va., Nov. 24—Five robbers held up a pawn shop, tied and gagged C. N. Jones, the proprietor, his clerk, R. G. Shaw, and two customers, and escaped with jewelry valued by Jones at $20,000. The men, taking their time, spent an hour in the shop collecting 900 watches, several hundred rings and a number of musical instruments.

Trained Owl Rides on Radiator of Auto

GREEN DEMANDS CODE PLACE

Washington, Nov. 24—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, has demanded greater representation of labor on code authorities, labor policy boards and industrial relations boards.

Green issued his statement at a time when considerable speculation had been aroused by the omission of the name of John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, from recommendations sent to President Roosevelt by Hugh S. Johnson for appointment to the national bituminous coal industrial board.

"At the present moment," Green said, "labor is resentful over the fact that it has to fight for even the minimum representation upon boards and administrative organizations created for the purpose of administering industrial codes of fair practice.

"Specifically labor holds that a duly accredited, publicly known representative of labor should be on the code authority of the bituminous coal code and labor should be adequately represented upon all other administrative boards created for the purpose of administering the bituminous coal code."

Malden Will Save Cash on Referenda

Instead of mailing a copy of proposed referenda to the 20,000 registered voters of Malden, the registrars have voted to advertise the referenda instead. It is figured that it will save the city several hundred dollars. One of the questions is whether or not the city shall adopt biennial elections. If this is approved at the city election Dec. 12, then the officials elected on that date will serve for two years, and the school board member for four years. The other referenda question is whether or not the city shall license the sale of liquors in Malden.

LIQUOR VOTE NEAR IN HOUSE

Two questions would be voted on:

"Shall licenses be granted for the sale of all alcoholic beverages?

"Shall license be granted for the sale of wine and malt beverages?"

The House then turnde back to consideration of the main hard liquor control bill and the expected most bitter contest in years.

Rep. John Dern of Uxbridge opposed the Hayes amendment. It would be just as logical to refer the matter of dispensing liquor in hotels and restaurants to the voters, hes aid.

As the record number of mandfents piled up, it became more and more apparent that a considerable part of the House membership was in favor of passing the package goods sections of the bill—on which there is general agreement—and leaving controversial points to be fought out separately.

C. F. Nelson Pratt of Saugus was one of those who expressed this view. He also charged that the House floor was covered with lobbyists and said that he would demand their ejection if they did not did not leave.

The opinion that women have no place in theliquor traffic also was reflected in some of the amendments offered today. One of these was a sweeping resolution that would forbid them to patronize liquor dispensaries or to be employed by them. More conservative was the suggestion of Rep. Hyman Mannevitch, Dorchester, which merely forbade their working in the proposed taverns.

The hip flask found a champion in Rep. Dexter Snow of Westfield, who moved that the word "sealed" be stricken from the clause which makes legal the transportation of packaged liquor.

Discrimination against aliens was urged by Rep. William Hickey of South Boston, who demanded that they be made ineligible for licenses.

that if he gets it he will have to pay $500. He names the politician as contact man with the licensing board and puts up a convincing argument. In cases where the prospect doesn't look good for $500, the price has been scaled down.

These demands, by what is nothing more nor less than an extortion ring, have been made and met in many cases. Even when a prospect refuses to pay and suspects the whole thing to be just a shakedown racket he is unwilling to make an official complaint for fear it will injure his chance of getting a license.

The cost of hard liquor licenses is still undetermined. Secretary Louis Epple of the licenseing board said he expects the price will be set along the lines of the old scale, which ranged from $500 for places selling light wines and beer to $2500 for hotels with the so-called "one-hour privilege"—special license to sell liquor between 11 p. m. and midnight.

The applications already on file are being separated according to police divisions and sent to the various divisions for investigation. In some cases the board also makes an investigation. Only 250 bottled goods licenses will be issued.

Arrange Last Rites of Furnace Victim

Funeral arrangements will be completed today for Mrs. Mary C. Thomas, 33, of Chestnut st. Woburn, whose unfamiliarity with the operation of a furnace caused her to be burned to death.

3 Children Die of Torture, Home Matrons Accused

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 24 (INS)—The recital of cruelties allegedly inflicted on inmates by matrons of the Children's Aid Society shelter here was to continue today before Ontario welfare officials.

Witnesses have introduced evidence concerning the death of three children among the 40 boys and girls housed in the shelter. The accused matrons, Miss Magdeline Strang, and her sister, Catherine, have been relieved of their duties pending outcome of the hearing.

Miss Estelle Coules, who said she was in charge of boys and small children in the Shelter for four months, told of a six-year-old girl dying in agony after being plunged into a chemical bath; and how Miss Catherine bumped the head of a 16-months-old baby girl, partly paralyzed, on the floor, then rammed food, which it refused to eat, down its throat.

Mrs. Charles Goodchild, another maid at the Shelter, told the court a three-months-old child was spanked within two days of its death from pneumonia. The third death was that of a 10-year-old boy.

Miss Kathleen McDonald, 25, another witness, testified that the children were forcibly fed when they failed to eat all of their meals. The never-changing menu consisted of porridge and bread for breakfast, soup and pudding for dniner, and two slices of bread—one spread with jam and the other with peanut butter—for supper. In winter a cup of hot cocoa or milk was added.

Other cruelties to which the maids have testified were dabbing of a burning astringent on tongues of disobedient children, whipping sun-burned backs of boys who had gone swimming, beating of the inmates with fists and straps and kicking a ten-year-old girl down stairs because she complained of an injured heel.

CURLEY PLAN UP TO BOARD

to provide work for 13,175 men and women. This is more than a third of the State's allotment, although the board only started to function Monday.

The agricultural department grant will be used for cleansing and spraying of dairy barns in all cities and towns; white pine blister rust control, and corn borer control.

The award to the Metropolitan District Commission, which will give jobs to many Boston men, will be devoted to improvements in the Fellsway, repairs and improvements at Nantasket and Revere Beaches, grading at the Blue Hills reservation and Riverside recreation grounds and work on police cables.

SPEEDUP PURCHASES

Another important ruling was made by the board in an effort to speed up projects. The board notified cities and towns that materials for the projects were to be treated as emergency purchases. Bids will be accepted by telephone and such bids must go on the records when bills for payment are presented.

The financial end of the program was completely organized yesterday by William B. Coy. City and town treasurers were designated as assistant disbursing officers. They will be limited to making payments for payrolls and non-personal services. No delay in payment is anticipated as 1,000,000 blank checks are ready for distribution.

All expenditures are to be certified by the civil works certifying agent, who will be the community welfare chairman, except in certain cases where changes might be necessary.

These disbursing officers will be bonded. Checks will be made out in triplicate, one for the worker, one for the board and the third for the special disbursing agent of the board.

THOUSANDS REGISTERED

The only apparent delay in the operations of the program now seems to be in the employment of one-half the men on projects from the lists of those who are not on community welfare rolls. Registration of these workers is being carried on by the Federal Re-employment Service.

Officers of the service in Boston and other large cities have been functioning well, it was said, and thousands have been registered. Chairman Bartlett said, however, that some new plan would be introduced to have registration of these men in smaller towns as well as in the cities.

Thousands of men and women again thronged the registration places today to get their names on the lists from which new employes will be taken. Women were registering at the State offices in the new public works building, Nashua st., while the men were at the South Armory, Irvington st.

CWA Airport Work Ready for Bay State, Ely Told

The Aeronautics Branch of the Department of Commerce informed Gov. Ely today that it was ready to begin immediately with the construction of new airports and the modernization of existing ones in all parts of the state.

This is to be its contribution to the Civil Works program and is to be carried out in co-operation with the state and municipalities, it was pointed out to the governor in a telegram today from G. L. Vidal, director of aeronautics of the department.

Construction activity in this state is to be part of a nation-wide undertaking, complete details of which are to be worked out in Washington at once. Gov. Ely was requested to send a representative to the capital at once to discuss Massachusetts' share in the project.

He turned over the wire to Joseph Bartlett, head of the emergency finance board, which has supervision of the commonwealth's participation in the civil works program. The wire follows:

"Arenautics branch, Department of Commerce, prepared to construct national network of airports in co-operation with CWA, states and municipalities. Sites must be owned or leased by state or municipality.

"Plan also includes improving existing inadequate fields. CWA must be under way in two weeks. Your co-operation by urging municipalities to acquire and submite sites to aeronautic branch, Department of Commerce, immediately is requested. Further request that you send a representative to Washington immediately to discuss program for your state."

The message is signed by G. L. Vidal, director of aeronautics, who only a few days ago announced the completion of an elaborate survey of the nation's flying facilities and flying needs. He is a brother of the West Point football hero.

Bartlett, on receiving the message from the Governor, at once conferred with Adj. Gen. George Agnew, requesting hi mto submit the name of a qualified man who can be sent to Washington today to get further information about the proposal.

Definite plans for Massachusetts' part in the project will be formulated just as soon as this representative sends his first report from the capital.

3 AUTO THIEVES SENTENCED

Three youths, convicted of stealing automobiles and accessories, were sentenced today to State's Prison and the House of Correction by Judge Louis S. Cox in Suffolk Superior Court.

They are Karl Peterson, 24, of South Green st., Sharon, who pleaded guilty and was sentenced to from 2½ to 3½ years in Charlestown; Adam Trottier, 24, of Dudley rd., Townsend, convicted by a jury and sentenced to from three to five years in prison, and Harry J. Morgan, 23, of Philips st., West End, also found guilty by a jury and ordered to the House of Correction for six months.

Prison sentences were meted out to Peterson and Trottier because the judge found they had been placed on probation but continued to associate with gang that stole cars and accessories.

Bridal Pair Survives Cruel Edict of Island 'Queen'

Guayaquil, Ecuador, Nov. 24 (INS)—Another weird chapter in the life of the Baroness Eloissa Bousquet de Wagner, self-styled "Queen of the Galapagos" came to light today with the revelation that she and her lawless band of courtiers cast away in a small boat a pair of young newlyweds who sought refuge on her island after a shipwreck.

Victims of her decree were Pablo Rolando, of Esmeraldas and his beautiful bride, the former Blanca Rosa Fernandez.

They drifted for several days in an open boat, the husband beating off three sailors who attempted to attack his wife, and were finally picked up by the clipper ship "Fortune."

ON HONEYMOON

Pablo Rolando and his wife were on a honeymoon trip aboard the yacht Santa Rosa. The vessel was overtaken by a terrific storm, and all aboard took to boats.

Rolando, Blanca Rosa and three sailors found themselves drifting toward the Galapagos in a lifeboat.

As they approached, members of the queen's strange court, consisting of European men, well-dressed and heavily armed, came running to meet them.

The five were taken before the baroness after being bound hand and foot. They told the story of the shipwreck, but the "queen," infuriated over their invasion of her "domain," ordered them imprisoned. She told them point-blank she neither was able nor desired to offer them hospitality.

SINGLE OAR USED

As a final diabolical act of punishment, the queen commanded that the seamen travel in one boat and the newlyweds in another. She deprived them of food and water and orderd them set adrift with but a single oar.

Far off the coast, the sailors rowed abreast of Rolando's craft and attempted to throw the husband overboard and attack his wife. Rolando drew a pistol he had hidden and fired at the attackers. All three fell into the sea and the couple resumed their voyage alone.

Heir to Irish Estate Sought at Fitchburg

Fitchburgh, Nov. 24—Judge Thomas F. Gallagher of the local court announced today he has been asked to help find John O'Hara, 33, formerly of Newry, County Down, Ireland, who left here for New Zealand and Judge Gallagher's wife is a relative. There is considerable property awaiting the son. John O'Hara, of 323 Mountain ave., Revere, is another relative.

5 YOUTHS HELD AS ROBBERS

Five Boston youths were arrested in the South End today for alleged robberies in Brockton, Holbrook, Randolph and other places, and police are seeking a man who acted as a "fence" and may have been the gang's organizer, and leader.

Eighty cartons of cigarettes were found in the two houses in which the boys were arrested. There also was stolen clothing which, police believe, was taken from a leading Boston concern.

The arrests followed an attempted robbery at Brockton last night. The license numbers of an auto were taken as the burglars fled. The trail led to Boston where it was found the car had been rented for $10 by Joseph DeLello, 18, of Blossom st., West End.

DeLello was arrested along with Edward Carr, 18, of Laconia st.; William Rowen, 16, of Dorchester ave.; Charles Monkiewocz, 17, of Trenton st., East Boston, and his brother, Edward, 19.

BURKE SEEKS TO HALT RETURN OF ELOPER

Arguments in the case of Mayor John H. Burke of Medford against reinstatement of Police Sergt. John C. McGrath, eloping policeman who was discharged from the force by Mayor Burke last spring and who was later ordered reinstated upon a court review of the case before Judge Robert W. Hill of Salem, sitting as special justice at Malden, were started before Judge Frederick T. Field in the Supreme court at East Cambridge today.

Mayor Burke seeks to prevent reinstatement of the policeman and today's arguments are by City Solicitor Lewis H. Peters of Medford to extend the record on or before Dec. 1. Edward J. Bushnell of Malden is counsel for McGrath.

Mayor Burke's action is to seek to have the Supreme court set aside the findings made by Judge Hill to reinstate the police sergeant. Although ordered reinstated last July, the officer's services have not been used in Medford pending the determination of the Supreme court action. The charges against the officer were preferred by Chief of Police Daniel W. Connors.

McGrath was charged with being absent from the city on two occasions without receiving leave of absence from the department, one date being when he filed marriage intentions, and the other when he married Claire Murphy Medford heiress.

UNION'S DEFEAT STIRS MINERS

Pittsburgh, Nov. 24 (AP)—Wild scenes of celebration, marked by fireworks and gunfire, broke out early today in the soft coal fields as opponents of the United Mine Workers hailed the union's first setback in collective bargaining balloting at "captive" mines.

A union slate of representatives yesterday went down to defeat in eight of the 14 Fayette County mines of the H. C. Frick Coke Co., U. S. Steel subsidiary, but the U. M. W. A. still holds a wide margin through its triumphs in 14 other non-commercial collieries Wednesday.

Yesterday's non-union victories were credited to the Miners' Independent Brotherhood, described by U. M. W. A. laders as a "company union." The Brotherhood also won at a 15th mine, making the two-day score, 20 for the union and 9 for its opponents.

Police Hold Ball

9 Newsboys Left Suits in Will

Baltimore, Nov. 24 (AP)—Nine newspaper carriers each Christmas day will receive a suit of clothes, according to the unique will of Arthur Wallenhurst, Baltimore jeweler and world traveler.

His largest bequest was one of $50,000 to be used for the erection of a bronze statue to Martin Luther—to be placed in any park the city may designate. He provided that $200 be turned over to the mayor and city council for the installation of clocks in parks.

Most of the bequests were to relatives, friends and charitable institutions, with the residue of the estate going to the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons for the establishment of a Masonic home.

MELT ALL GOLD, SAYS VANDERLIP

New York, Nov. 24 (INS)—Opposition to "unrestricted currency inflation" was voiced today by Frank A. Vanderlip, noted banker, in a memorandum to the Committee for the Nation. He suggested that the federal administration take these steps:

Prohibit Federal Reserve Banks from receiving deposits from foreign central banks.

Retain government control of all foreign exchange transactions and specifically define that gold will be supplied only for settling legitimate foreign trade balances.

"These steps," the financier said "would return the United States to the gold standard, stop gyrations of the foreign exchange market, prevent gold hoarding and give legitimate exporters and importers a solid basis on which to calculate."

Code of "Dishonor" Adopted at B. U.

Major and minor degrees of "cribbing" are defined in a new code drawn up by the Boston University faculty in the College of Business Administration.

Such dishonor in a major assignment will mean expulsion from the course under the terms of the new code. "Cribbing" in a minor assignment means a failure in that assignment for the first offense and expulsion for any repetition.

Springfield Violin Expert Dies Aged 74

Springfield, Nov. 24—Edward Kinney, for more than 40 years an expert violin maker here, is dead at the age of 74. He was also noted locally as a musician, playing for 15 years in the Springfied Symphony Orchestra.

TODAY

should amuse you. I also paint and play on the flute."

In the life of Leonardo you are amazed at his versatility. He was a painter, sculptor, architect, engineer, musician, mathematician, poet, anatomist, botanist, physicist, and more than 400 years ago he designed an airplane that would have flown had he had a modern gas engine.

Young gentlemen who want to be artistic geniuses overnight would not like Leonardo's suggestion that seven years' apprenticeship should be spent learning how to mix paints.

They should none the less read his treatise on painting. Every good painter reads that.

Sherlock Holmes and all detectives, real or imaginary, would take off their hats before a "true story" that comes from Chicago. A young woman, 23 years old, is found shot dead on an operating table in the private hospital of her mother-in-law, Dr. Alice Lindsey Wynekoop.

Some careful criminal is involved. The revolver, found near the almost nude dead body, had no fingerprints. Perhaps rubber gloves, which can always be found in an operating room, had been used. The body was partly covered with a light cotton shirt, but the bullet shot through the back, into the heart, had not gone through that garment.

This extraordinary case, without a clue thus far, invites detectives and newspapermen to show what they can do. If no one talks, the case will remain a mystery. But, nearly always, someone talks, and someone tells.

Another strange case, at Meridian, Miss. A well-known physician was shot dead as he sat at his dinner table on Monday last. Public officials say the case is one of "justifiable homicide," but do not tell who did the justifiable killing, or what the justification was, and now the county attorney says, "So far as the prosecuting authorities are concerned the case is closed."

All interested in flying will regret the Russian disaster, 14 engineers, mechanics and factory managers killed in an airplane just built, biggest in the world, made to carry 128 persons. This accident will not discourage the Russians, who will promptly start to build more planes, and bigger.

There is no enthusiasm greater or more productive than that of a revolution, as shown in France, but it dies out, and then comes a Napoleon to do men's thinking for them, and restore their failing will power.

TRAWLER SUES CRASH TUG

An admiralty suit for $6000 damages has been filed in U. S. District Court by the owner of the Boston trawler, Holy Cross, against the tug Perth Amboy, as the result of a collision six miles off Boston light on the night of May 5, 1932. The Perth Amboy is owned by the Interports Transportation Corp., 17 Battery pl., New York.

The Holy Cross was returning from a fishing trip off Georges' Bank. The plaintiff's libel cites that the Holy Cross collided with the first barge in the Perth Amboy's tow; that the skipper of the Holy Cross saw the navigation lights of the tug crossing his course and that the barge carried no lights. Holy Cross, Inc., of which Francis J. O'Hara is president, charges the tug with negligence.

Prisons Without Jobs Just Crime Schools Says Gill

Prisons without occupational therapy are nothing more than "graduate schools of crime," the Massachusetts Association for Occupational Therapy was told today at the opening of its two-day conference in the Y. W. C. A. Building, Clarendon st., Back Bay.

The speaker was Howard B. Gill, superintendent of the statae prison colony at Norfolk.

He said a professional therapist is now at work at Norfolk and has made a decided change among the prisoners there.

"Under the old-fashioned prison system," he said, "80 per cent of the men released turn out to be failures. These figures justify the popular conception of state prisons as graduate schools of crime.

"Without occupational therapy a prison is like a hospital in which no one knows what is the matter with any of the patients and in which no one is doing anything to cure the individual patient."

He said that each group of 50 men at Norfolk is provided a workshop, where work may be done with wood, metal, leather or other materials that are furnished.

The first day's program included greetings and an address by Dr. William A. Bryan, superintendent of Worcester State Hospital and president of the association.

Other speakers were Dr. M. N. Smith-Petersen, orthopedic surgeon at Massachusetts General Hospital; Dr. Winfred Overholser, assistant commissioner of the Massachusetts State Department of Mental Diseases; Mrs. John A. Greene, director of the Boston School of Occupational Therapy; Mrs. Katherine Osborne, director of the Boston Students' Union; Miss Helene Martha Boll, lecturer and teacher. Technical instruction in tapestry weaving was given by Geza Gilbert Foldes of New York.

Round tables discussions on work in hospitals, prisons, mental institutions are on tomorrow's program.

PANAMA PLANS SWEEPSTAKES

Panama City, C. Z., Nov. 24—This city bustles today entertaining early winter visitors and proceeding with many plans for a variety of diversions to rival those of other tourist centers of the Caribbean. Panama has issued a challenge to Miami, Havana and other winter resorts for winter tourist trade.

Panama is a nation of sharp contrasts. On one side is the gigantic Panama Canal, with the mighty Gatun Locks. Only a short distance away are the ruins of the first city of Panama, founded in 1519 by Pedro Arias de Avila and destroyed 152 years after by Henry Morgan the buccaneer.

Panama takes its sports seriously. Horse races are staged the year around. Native sportsmen have joined with those of America and Britain in establishing the Panama International Racing Association, which in turn promotes the famous Panama International.

A drawing will be on the same day as the running of the Panama Christmas Handicap on December 24. It will be directed and supervised by government agents, the government receiving a share of the profits to be distributed through charity institutions and relieve the tax burden of the Republic.

Mayor on Vacation Despite Campaign

St. Petersburg, Fla., Nov. 24—Nothing is going to interfere with the annual visit of Mayor H. D. McCarthy of Ingersoll, Ont. The Mayor has arrived here for his 15th annual visit, leaving his home town in the heat of a campaign for reelection.

Said the mayor: "All right, go ahead and nominate me, elect me. I'll be back next spring." Mayor McCarthy has served two terms previously—but always with the proviso that his official duties won't interfere with his southern trip.

State Must Feed Elk When Hunters Miss

Cheyenne, Wyo., Nov. 24—Because hunters haven't killed enough elk, the State Legislature is faced with the rather paradoxical problem of keeping them alive.

The state game and fish commission usually feeds around 20,000 elk in the Jackson Hole country each winter. This year, because of lack of snow, hunters have been unable to get at the animals, hence the Legislature is to be asked for $15,000 in addition to the regular appropriation for feed.

Son of Ad Executive Weds Society Girl

New York, Nov. 24—Miss Barbara May of New York and Southport, Conn., and Barron Collier, Jr., wed in St. James Church, will honeymoon in the West Indies.

She is the daughter of George Oliver May and the late Mrs. May. He is the son of the advertising, real estate and hotel executive. The Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan performed the ceremony.

Maine to Build Fish Pool With U. S. Cash

Augusta, Me., Nov. 24—The State Fish and Game Department has become the first state agency to take advantage of the federal transient relief program. John A. McDonough, Maine relief administrator, has approved employment of 150 men to build two miles of trout rearing pools near the state fish and game farm at Dry Mills.

Mercury Hits High Mark in Los Angeles

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 24 — The temperature has touched record heights for the latter part of November in Southern California. The official reading here was 91 and at Santa Ana an official mark of 105 was recorded. The previous high was set November 28, 1924, when the mercury hit 90 here. It was 18½ degrees above normal.

And They Too Had Pictures

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

First nudist wedding at Lake Elsinore, California.

She wore a large bouquet of wild flowers and ferns.

She should have worn a bale of hay.

The bridegroom wore no boutonniere. He had no lapels.

It's the perfect wedding. No hose to mend and no millinery bills to battle over.

We will be around on their fiftieth anniversary and shower them with golden California sunshine.

No old shoes were thrown at the happy couple. The best they could do in the nudist colony was a pair of pearl grey spats and three bunion plasters.

The bride and groom will spend their honeymoon in San Francisco where the police are getting ready to measure them for two empty flour barrels.

HAGAN OPPOSES MORE POLICE

Mayor-elect James E. Hagan of Somerville, writing as a private citizen, today asked the alderman to defeat a measure calling for 12 new policemen and 12 additional firemen.

He argued that the added expense was unwarranted, that the added protection was not neded and that the city's finances should first be put in shape before placing more burdens on the taxpayers.

Hagan said the police chief had not asked for more men and that the city was well-equipped with both police and fire protection. He estimated the cost of the proposed additions at $36,000 to $42,300 the first year.

CLEANSER CODE BOOSTS PRICES

Cleansing and pressing prices in the Boston Trade Area will be approximately 25 per cent higher than the present levels, starting Monday, according to announcements made today by almost all of the cleansers in the city.

The higher prices represent the minimum set for this area in the code approved yesterday by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, national recovery administrator. The scale of prices will be effective for a 30-day trial period, after which it may be revised.

Under the new scale, the cleansing of men's suits and women's plain dresses will cost 85 cents. This work is now being done here at prices ranging from 39 to 65 cents. Silk and ruffled dresses will cost $71, compared with the present 49 to 75 cents spread. Evening gowns and velvet garments will be cleansed for $1.25. Other prices will be in proportion.

AD CLUB BACKS BOSTON DRIVE

First of the many Boston organizations which have volunteered co-operation with the $4,500,000 emergency campaign of 1934 swung into action after leaders of the Advertising Club of Boston met with Francis W. Hatch, chairman of the publicity committee, it was announced today.

Radio, outdoor advertising, posters and car-cards, together with an extensive direct mail program, will combine to help bring before the public the message of the more than 100 hospital, welfare societies and other charitable organizations.

State Police Called in Tanners' Rioting

Gloversville, N. Y., Nov. 24 (AP)—Sheriff Lee Inghram of Fulton County today asked Governor Lehman to send state police to Gloversville and Johnston, declaring the tannery strike situation was "beyond control of local authorities."

A crowd of 500 strikers and sympathizers broke windows in the plant and forced 14 employes to remain inside until 1:30 o'clock this morning. The workers were permitted to leave the building after Eugene Filmer, superintendent, agreed to discontinue operations.

HOOVER TOLD TO 'MIND HIS OWN BUSINESS'

Washington, Nov. 24 (INS)—Albert H. Wiggin, former head of the Chase National Bank, was so powerful a figure in December, [illegible] he sent word to President Hoover to mind his own business, William Fox, motion picture magnate, testified today at the Senate banking inquiry.

Fox said Wiggin sent the message to Mr. Hoover through Claudius H. Huston, then Republican national chairman, when the latter attempted to placate the bankers' enmity for the movie magnate.

Fox said Huston first had told the President about his troubles with the New York bankers. Then Fox added, Huston went to see Wiggin, trying to rescue the Fox film empire from the bankers.

"Mr. Wiggin told Huston to tell the President of the U. S. to please mind his own business," said Fox.

Fox made a [illegible] recital of the [illegible] to President Hoover in [illegible] 1929 when the Department of Justice was threatening [illegible] after the Coolidge administration had approved the [illegible] Fox Film [illegible]

Fox then recited how in the fall of 1929 when he [illegible] he had [illegible] Washington [illegible] President [illegible] that the [illegible] successful.

Then he said [illegible] Wiggin [illegible] Now I had [illegible] Wiggin had to [illegible] the Chase [illegible] Fox [illegible] and all the other banks would go along [illegible] the [illegible]

[illegible] Mr. Hoover's interference [illegible] matter.

Fox charged Clarence Dillon, head of Dillon, Read and Co., with being as much his enemy as Wiggin. He recited one occasion when Dillon refused to participate in a $[illegible],000 loan to him even though the interest was fixed at a rate equal to 87 per cent a year.

If You Like Puzzles, Try This Bridal

Rochester, N. H., Nov. 24 (AP) When Miss June A. Perry of North Vassalboro, Me., became the bride of Allie Story, local mill worker, two families were joined in more ways than ordinary.

The bride is the daughter, by a previous marriage, of Mrs. George Story of North Lebanon, Me. The bridegroom is the son of George Story, also by a previous marriage.

So the bride became the wife of her step-brother, her step-father's daughter-in-law and the wife of her mother's step-son; George Story is his step-daughter's father-in-law, the bridegroom's step-mother is also his mother-in-law and he is his step-mother's son-in-law. And if you want any more relationships figure them out for yourself.

WARNS WOMEN OF AUTO DRUNK

An auto driver after a few drinks requires 30 feet more to stop his car in an emergency than the driver who has had no liquor to drink.

This statement was made today through the Governor's committee on highway safety by Mrs. William J. MacDonald of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, who said it was based on tests made by experts.

"The clear-headed operator has a much better chance of avoiding a bad accident than the one whose brain has been clouded by liquor," she said.

"Another thing that has been said is that as many accidents have been caused by drunken pedestrians as by drunken operators.

"After repeal more care will be needed on the part of both drivers and pedestrians to keep accidents down to a minimum."

SENATOR AND 86 CONVICTED IN RUM RING

Philadelphia, Nov. 24 (AP)—State Senator John J. McClure was convicted today as the leader of the alleged Delaware County liquor "protection" organization and was given a sentence for conspiracy of 18 months and a $10,000 fine.

Seventy others also were convicted and were sentenced, together with 15 additional defendants who pleaded guilty and the one woman indicted who offered no defense. Many were given suspended sentences, placed on probation or both.

Ninety-six persons were indicted but charges against three were nolle prossed and six others did not come to trial for various reasons. Thus eighty-seven were sentenced today.

Eugene F. White, chief clerk of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives and a Chester ward leader, was sentenced to a year and a day and fined $2500.

John F. Bauer, private secretary to McClure, was given fifteen months in jail and a fine of $5000.

O. N. Smith, chief of Bewley, was fined $500 and placed on three years' probation in addition to getting a suspended sentence.

James Mc[illegible], state detective attache of the district attorney's office and Michael Treatrail, county detective, were sentenced to 15 months and $2000 fines.

Thomas McComb, first of the alleged Ware leaders from Chester to be sentenced, got six months in jail and a $1000 fine.

Howard M. Reese, former Fourth Ward magistrate accused of splitting fines and faking warrants, was given a six months suspended sentence but ordered committed to jail until a $100 fine is paid.

Samuel De P[illegible], alleged collector for the organization, was sentenced to nine months in jail and a fine of $500.

One witness, who said he was a "personal investigator" for McClure, estimated that the ring collected more than $220,000 in its peak year. The government said the organization existed more than ten years.

Each defendant faces a maximum sentence of two years in a federal penitentiary and a fine of $10,000.

In a trial which lasted more than seven weeks the government charged that a political organization led by the Senator collected protection from speakeasy and still operators, bootleggers and smugglers, gamblers and disorderly house proprietors. In return it hired police officers to guard those who paid and raid those who refused.

QUINCY MAYOR ASKS $850,000

Washington, Nov. 24 (AP). Mayor Charles A. Ross and City Auditor George H. [illegible] of Quincy, Mass., today urged public works officials to speed action on municipal public works projects involving $850,000.

The Quincy officials said their projects had been approved by the State public works board some time ago and that they hoped to obtain early approval here for the program.

"There has been an impression in some quarters," Ross said, "that because of contracts for naval construction awarded the Fore River plant of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co. our unemployment problem is solved.

"The fact is, work on the new vessels will not be sufficiently advanced to provide substantial employment before next spring. Meantime we want to go ahead with our public works program and give employment to hundreds now idle."

Ross said his program prepared on the usual loan and grant basis involved road building, sewer extension, park and school projects.

Shock of Immersion Kills Bay State Man

Sanford, Me., Nov. 24 (AP)—Frank Garland, 51, a mill worker, died today in the No. 1 mill pond of the Sanford Mills. Garland, whose home is in Norwood, Mass., came here to work three months ago.

Dr. S. A. Cobb said death was due to shock as there was no water in Garland's lungs despite the fact that a half hour elapsed between the time his cries were heard and the body recovered.

King's Speech Called Insult by Laborite

London, Nov. 24 (INS)—The Laborite opposition in the House of Commons opened a barrage on the King's speech to Parliament today.

Clement R. Attlee, Laborite, declared the address, setting forth the views of the Macdonald government, was an "insult" to the electorate.

Attlee said the speech showed an "extraordinary air of complacency," and charged the government failed to appreciate the crisis confronting the world.

Touring Boston's Gay Spots

Steuben's Restaurant, 114 Boylston st., is celebrating their first anniversary this week with a gala entertainment each evening in the Rathskeller. Music for dancing is furnished by Jacques Fisher and his Steuben Orchestra.

Manager Joseph Snider has made elaborate plans for the football fans on Friday and Saturday nights of this week. The Rathskeller is the scene of a bridge party nearly every afternoon, and Assistant Manager Max Snider announces a large number of private parties booked up throughout the winter season.

Died by Ether and Bullet

Rheta Gardner Wynekoop, the victim of one of the strangest deaths in police annals. Her mother-in-law, Dr. Alice Wynekoop, claims that the young girl died under the influence of chloroform administered to relieve pain, and that she then shot her daughter-in-law to make it appear that the girl had been killed by a burglar.

Detector Won't React Properly on Aged Dr Wynekoop

[illegible]

The "electrical third degree"—the lie detecting instrument—which was given Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop and her son, Earle, by the Chicago police today, is here shown in operation. University professors helped experts of the police department. Dr. Wynekoop's heart beats were too irregular for the instrument to function properly, but the reactions when her son took the chair were wholly different.

"Why was your wife murdered?"

The theory behind the questioning is that guilty knowledge will be betrayed by great variations of the [illegible] when significant questions are asked. Minor questions are put to record a [illegible] so that deviations may be clearly shown.

Earle was questioned for several hours. During this time the same questions were asked over and over again. The machine's recording of the answers at different times then were compared. In this way the scientists minimized chance reactions.

YALE

IT TAKES HEALTHY NERVES— TO BREAK RECORDS IN THE AIR!

HE FLEW AROUND THE WORLD ALONE! Wiley Post climbs out of the Winnie Mae at Floyd Bennett Field as the whole world applauds his skill and marvelous physical endurance. "Smoking Camels as I have for so long," says Post, "I never worry about healthy nerves—and I'm a constant smoker, too."

FLYING EIGHT DAYS AND NIGHTS without a stop, Frances Marsalis and Louise Thaden set the world's endurance flight record for women. Miss Thaden says, "For some years I've smoked Camels. They taste better." Also a Camel fan, Miss Marsalis says, "I've never changed because I can't afford to take chances with my nervous system."

RACING ACROSS AMERICA in 10 hours and 5½ minutes, Col. Roscoe Turner recently added a new West-East transcontinental speed record to the East-West record he won earlier this year. "Like most pilots I smoke a lot," says Col. Turner. "I smoke Camels for the sake of healthy nerves, and I enjoy them more."

SHE: Why is it that all you pilots smoke Camels, too? Is it because they're milder?

HE: That's one way of putting it. You see, pilots smoke a lot and they have found that Camels don't give them jumpy nerves.

A MATCHLESS BLEND

IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand. Leaf tobaccos for cigarettes can be bought from 5c a pound to $1.00...but Camel pays the millions more that insure your enjoyment.

Steady Smokers turn to Camels

Men and women who are famous for their brilliant flying agree about smoking and healthy nerves. "I never worry about healthy nerves," they say, "because I smoke Camels."

They cannot afford to make a mistake in choosing their cigarette. They have to know. And it is more fun to know, because of the greater smoking pleasure they find in Camels. Camels are milder... better in taste. They leave no "cigaretty" aftertaste.

Change to Camels... and see for yourself that they do not get on your nerves or tire your taste!

4 Moods of Killer

DR. WYNEKOOP IN DRAMATIC CONFESSION

ment made public by Capt. Thomas Duffy

"During our married life there was no great desire for companionship between us. My wife's health began failing last year and she became finally tubercular.

"An examination by a physician disclosed that she was slightly mentally deranged. At times Rheta had put drugs in cooking kettles, and portions of fillings from a knife sharpened. This concerned mother very much. She became highly nervous about these conditions in our home."

Rheta and Earle, who was closer to his mother than any other of her children, lived with Dr. Wynekoop in the gloomy house of death, scene of three deaths in three years

"I believe my mother had a motive," Earle was quoted by Asst. State's Atty. Long. "She was unhappy because she knew I was unhappy over my married life. My wife and I were incompatible a month after we were married."

Mother and son were not permitted to embrace—not permitted to even approach close to one another One sat on one side of the room, one on the other.

Almost immediately police began to read the "partial confession."

At the first words, Dr. Wynekoop's gray head dropped and she seemed about to collapse completely. Detectives rushed to her side to hold her up.

Contents of the "partial confession" were not revealed by police

Soon after the reading of the document Earle was led to an adjoining private office and was closeted with Dr. Harry Hoffman of the criminal court's behavior clinic.

HER CALM ALL GONE

Other authorities continued their grim, relentless questioning of the mother. Her former composed attitude was gone. She faltered in her replies. She was physically exhausted.

All through the night, the widower, red-eyed, his hair tousled by nervous hands, had been subjected to thorough examination. When the lie detector was applied, police said it was evident he was not telling the full truth

His mother had met the earlier bombardment of questions calmly Albeit tiring from the continual strain since the body of her daughter-in-law was found Tuesday night partly nude, shot through the back while lying on an operating table in her mother-in-law's surgery, even at 5 a. m. today, when the police yielded and let her rest.

For three hours at another station she remembered little details of her household and told her son Walker, to be sure to order coal today

Coroner Walsh said he was informed young Wynekoop had signed no confession yet but that police expected him to soon"

Capt. Duffy, emerging from the dramatic scene between the mother and her son, expressed some disappointment with the progress of the inquiry.

"We thought we had something," he said, "but it didn't break"

Previously as Dr. Wynekoop was led from the station she pleaded in vain with the officers that she be permitted to go home.

"Won't you let me go home now?" she asked. "Please let me go home now. I've done everything you wanted me to. I've answered all your questions. I've helped you in every way I could"

Then officers told her she was being taken to a place where she could get some much-needed rest.

Sunday Night,.. ①

Precious - I'm choked - you are gone — you have called me up — and after ten minutes or so, I called and called — no answer! Maybe you are sleeping — You need to be — but I want to hear your voice again tonight — I would give anything I have — to spend an hour — in nice talk with you — tonight, — and I cannot — — — Good night

This note, found among the papers of Dr. Alice Wynekoop, was still puzzling police today. The aged mother-in-law of the surgery victim claims it was written to her son and does not relate to the slain girl. Investigators, however, are trying to link it with the killing. (International News Photos.)

Earle Wynekoop with Police Capt. Thomas Duffy, who made the announcement in Chicago today that the "lie detector" had wrung a 'confession' from Wynekoop in the operating room murder of his wife. The man's mother, Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop, was then called to confront him. The 'confession' later was partly repudiated by police.

DR. ALICE L. WYNEKOOP DR. CATHERINE WYNEKOOP REV. JOHN HENRY HOPKINS

During the police investigation that preceded her confession, Dr. Alice L. Wynekoop was allowed to return to her home, where she discussed the strange circumstances of the murder of her daughter-in-law, Rheta, with her daughter, Dr. Catherine Wynekoop, and the family cleric, Rev. John Henry Hopkins. To them she gave no hint of the startling confession she was to make a little later to police. In her confession the white-haired mother-in-law explained she administered chloroform to the girl, planning to examine her

WHAT POLICE FOUND IN CLINIC SEARCH

Someone in the murder of Rheta Gardner Wynekoop—either the girl before she knew her doom or the killer as she lay dying or who straightened up after the operating-room crime—placed the clothing the victim had worn in neat little piles. Her undies were on an instrument table, her shoes and dress on a chair. The fur coat she had worn was shoved behind rubbish in a corner. (International News Photo.)

CAFFERY TO BE NEW ENVOY OF U. S. TO CUBA

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 24—Sumner Welles is soon to be replaced as ambassador to Cuba by Jefferson Caffery, of the State Department, President Roosevelt announced last night, saying:

"Ambassador Welles is returning to Havana within the next few days. As previously announced upon the termination of his mission, which will be in the near future, he will return to Washington to resume his former duties as assistant Secretary of State, and will be replaced by Mr. Jefferson Caffery, now serving as assistant Secretary of State."

[illegible]

"We earnestly hope that in the near future through a spirit of compromise on all sides the Cuban people themselves will reach some peaceful agreement which may result in general support of the government and thus avoid continued civil disturbance with its attendant tragic loss of life and grave prejudice of the social and economic interests of the republic."

CONTRACT BRIDGE TECHNIQUE -:- THAT GIRL FROM NEW YORK

Doubling Often Aids Declarer to Play Correctly and Win the Contract

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

One of the major objections to the doubling for penalties habit, characteristic of many otherwise good bridge players, is that too often such doubles furnish the Declarer the key to the correct play of the hand. Such was the case in a recent rubber bridge game in Stockholm, Sweden, in which the double by North player gave Mr. Ivar Anderson, one of Sweden's leading players, an opportunity to make a contract that without the illuminating double must surely have been defeated.

The hand was
West Dealer

North:
♠ 9 5 2
♡ 10 8 5
◇ K Q 3
♣ 10 7 5 2

West:
♠ A K 8 3

East:
♠ Q J 4
♡ K Q J
◇ 10 9 6 5 4

South:
♠ 10 7 6
♡ A 9 7 6 4 3 2
♣ 8 6 4

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
2 ◇	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
6 ◇	Double	Pass	Pass
Redouble	Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding

With West's unusual distribution the opening bid of two diamonds cannot be criticized and the eventual slam contract no doubt should have been reached. In a certain sense North's double appears perfectly sound as one [illegible] his trump combination [illegible] him 2 tricks. However, with no other tricks upon which to base a double and East and West's strong bidding North would have done well to have been content merely with the defeat of the contract without seeking to enhance the reward for that achievement.

North's opening lead was a heart and when South played the Ace Mr. Andersson knew that North had all the missing trumps, as otherwise he would have had no reason whatever to double.

Basing his play upon this conclusion, Mr. Andersson trumped the Ace of hearts, cashed three spade tricks and two club tricks, then ruffed one of his high clubs in Dummy and followed with the ruff of a high heart in his own hand. He returned to the Dummy by ruffing the remaining club and when North followed suit on this trick he could see the probability of success. Dummy's last high heart was now ruffed and Mr. Andersson then led his last spade. The careful carrying out of a well conceived plan limited North to one trump trick and allowed Mr. Andersson to fulfill his contract.

Today's uestion

TODAY'S QUESTION

I am told that on the following bidding

South	North
2 ♠	2 N T

North may now pass because a game has been reached and his obligation is ended. This does not seem right to me and I should like your ruling.

Answer: Of course the forcing situation has not been ended and North must make some response to four clubs. The purpose of the Forcing bid is to insure hands being played at a game contract and neither member of the partnership can pass except when the final bid represented arrival at such a contract.

Psoriasis Not Contagious

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

MY NEIGHBOR who suffers from a skin disease called psoriasis is very fond of my small son. I am concerned about my child catching the disease. Is there any danger?

Dr. Copeland

I was glad to answer this query and advise the worried parent that there is no need for anxiety. Psoriasis is a chronic inflammation of the skin. It is not contagious and cannot be transmitted from one individual to another. Nor is it a sign of general ill health, for strange as it may seem the condition is frequently found in robust and otherwise perfectly healthy persons.

CONFUSED WITH ECZEMA

[illegible] with eczema [illegible] scaly and [illegible] unexposed surface of the body.

Eczema [illegible] may be found anywhere on the body, especially the hands and face. One thing eczema has in common with psoriasis is that it is not contagious.

At one time psoriasis was believed to be caused by an infection. This theory has long been discarded. [illegible] the exact nature of which has not yet been discovered.

LOW PROTEINS BENEFICIAL

A recent report states that sufferers from this skin affliction are benefited by a diet that is low in protein. These authorities claim that when the diet is exceedingly low in protein food [illegible] tears and only faint traces can be detected. Sufficient protein is included in the diet to make up for "wear and tear" of the body without increasing the protein content. It is advised that foods such as meat, fish, fowl, meat soups, eggs, liver and kidneys, which are high in protein content, be omitted from the diet. Of course, a diet as severe as this should only be continued under the personal supervision of a physician.

Since psoriasis is a chronic disturbance and requires prolonged treatment, the victim becomes discouraged and sometimes resorts to patent medicines. The number of salves and ointments that have been recommended for this disorder is legion. In desperation, the sufferer will try anything once and in many instances the "remedy" irritates his skin rather than benefits it.

Britain Urges Hitler Into Arms Parley

London, Nov. 24 (AP)—Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, told the House of Commons today that Great Britain [illegible] to do everything possible to make Germany, which withdrew from the disarmament conference at Geneva last month, a partner in arms discussions.

The foreign secretary said there could have been no procedure more calculated to drive the iron into Germany's soul than to have told her that withdrawal from the conference made no difference, that [illegible] would be completed [illegible] to sign [illegible].

"Germany," said Sir John, "is not a target for dictation; she is a partner for discussion."

Jerry Takes His Bride Visiting and Promises Her He Will Build Her a Home

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Lovely young Eden Lane and handsome Jerry Evan, a banker, fall in love on sight. Five years before, following a disastrous love experience, Eden had come to New York. She obtained a position with an advertising concern and that, together with the income from her mother's estate, permitted her to live comfortably. After two years in New York she met Jake Pierson, an undemonstrative sort who aroused ardor by his lack of it. He proposed to Eden, but, while she enjoyed his companionship thoroughly, she did not love him. Following Eden's rejection Jake disappeared. When next she saw him he was married, but his wife had gone to Arizona for her health. Jerry and Eden are finally married in New York and spend a four-day honeymoon at Atlantic City. Elizabeth Prentiss, Jerry's hometown girl friend, is stunned by the news of his marriage. In New York Jake reappears and accompanies Eden and Jerry on a party where Jerry meets Lola. Jerry and Lola disappear at the party and Jake has to take Eden home. The next day Jerry loses his job and they go back to Jerry's home town in Vermont to live with his mother.

NOW CONTINUE THE STORY

By ALLENE CORLISS

"Nonsense, woman!" Jerry's eyes were definitely annoyed. "Where's your well-known sense of humor?"

"I've been wondering myself, Jerry. I seem to have mislaid it just when it looks as if I needed it most."

Jerry stared at her [illegible], said rather grimly, "Now, don't tell me you're going to brood over that, Eden. Lots of women Mother's age don't approve of lipstick—" His eyes [illegible] with her to "snap out of it." To "forget about it," as he would have said.

"I know, darling. But I don't have to live with them. And I do have to live with your mother. At least I think I do. How about it, Jerry. Must I?"

"Why, I'm afraid so—for a while at least. But let's not go into that, now. We're both jittery as the devil, Eden. You've been shut up in this house for three days and you hate it like blazes and no wonder! Go get your hat, darling, and powder your nose so you'll be a credit to me and I'll take you places—" [illegible]

He took her to [illegible]

Friendships Begun in Impulsive Manner

They welcomed Jerry and Eden [illegible]

[illegible]

Betty looked pleased. "It's rather nice, isn't it? We built it last year. It was great fun."

"Don't you believe her," Bill contradicted, coming in with an efficient-looking tray. "It was terrible. We fought like the devil about everything except the bathrooms. We both agreed we couldn't have too many of those."

"I've always had a secret passion," Eden told [illegible], "to build a house. The nearest I ever came to it was furnishing a flock of three room apartments."

"Cheer up, gal. I'll [illegible] you a house [illegible]" Jerry [illegible] Bill pour Scotch expertly into [illegible] glasses.

"Is that a promise, Jerry?"

"Hark all ye unbelievers—"

"Perhaps, Eden had rather have gin—" suggested Betty.

"There isn't any," [illegible] her. "I told you to call Jimmy up and you—"

"Well, you might have done it yourself," he retorted. "[illegible] I'm not particularly keen about holding cozy little conversations over the telephone with your bootlegger, even if he is young and handsome. I hope," she told Eden, "that you like Scotch—"

Eden assured her that she did.

"Most girls don't. Most girls," Betty announced authoritatively, "like gin better. Except Nedra Seton—but then Nedra's funny anyway. She drinks Scotch and water and never gets the least bit tight. You haven't met Nedra [illegible] have you? I don't suppose you have—[illegible] only been here three days. Perhaps you noticed her in church this morning? She's really stunning looking—I think she had on her caracul coat—Bill, did Nedra have on her caracul coat this morning?"

"How do I know?"

"Well, anyway, she was there and I think she had on her caracul coat. You'll meet her soon, anyway. Which reminds me, Eden—you don't mind my calling you Eden, do you? Right away like this? I'm like that. Bill says that it's my impulsive nature. He says that if I were left alone with St. Peter five minutes I'd be calling him Pete—but what I started to say was, I want to give a tea for you. You see, all the girls are crazy to meet you. Most of them have known Jerry for years, of course, and they're keen to meet you—" There was a lot more of this, another round of Scotch and eventually some fried egg sandwiches and coffee in the kitchen.

"Happier?"

"Quite a lot. I wish, Jerry—"

"What do you wish, Mrs. Evans?"

"That we had a house of our own. Just a very small house—on any street—"

"Well, you heard what I said, didn't you? I meant it. I'll build you one some day."

"When, Jerry?"

"Oh, some day."

"Can I count on that, Mr. Evans?"

"As sure as I love you, Mrs. Evans."

[illegible] very dark [illegible] the street [illegible]. They looked [illegible] each other's eyes.

"Don't you think we might?" Eden asked wistfully.

"I'll go even further than that and say I see no reason at all why we shouldn't."

[illegible]

Eden reached slowly for a mirror [illegible] face downward on the black walnut dresser, lifted it carefully and stared at herself long and searchingly. And as she stared, the mirrored eyes lost something of [illegible] and became faintly [illegible] the [illegible] line of [illegible] for a moment into [illegible]

"Portrait of a discontented wife," she murmured lightly but quite clearly, and let the mirror slide out of her fingers.

She did things to her face then, mechanically but carefully as one does something which has become more or less of a habit but which one knows is still important. She drew a lipstick expertly across her mouth, then leaned forward and persuaded most of its color off with the tip of her little finger. And as she did this [illegible] same mocking [illegible] at the corners of [illegible]

[illegible] the elder woman's large blue eyes had fastened themselves upon the soft crimson of her mouth. And remembering this she felt again the same suffocating sense of impotent anger that Julia Evans' cool blue gaze was always to rouse in her.

She had tried since that Sunday [illegible] his mother with [illegible] futile [illegible] had [illegible] lived [illegible] earned for [illegible] a person. A person [illegible] she had learned that two people could be [illegible] to each other physically, that arms might embrace and lips [illegible] and hands respond and yet those two people could be far apart [illegible] separated.

Guest of Honor at a Tea

[illegible] had happened [illegible] Remembered suddenly that she was dressing for a tea. A tea at which she was to be the guest of honor. With a mouth that looked so troubled, so obviously worried?

She shrugged and said a dull good [illegible] of her throat. "You [illegible] your [illegible] daughter [illegible] do anything about your eyes [illegible] hope that people would [illegible] notice the [illegible] of them would [illegible]. People were so much [illegible] with your laughter and the things you said than they ever were [illegible] your eyes and the things they said. That is most people were. There were some who weren't of course. Eden had a [illegible] that Betty Rand might not be. Betty was friendly and pretty and terribly inquisitive. Eden [illegible] that she [illegible]

[illegible]

She [illegible] drew a small [illegible] over the [illegible] smoothness of her hair [illegible] into a [illegible] square [illegible] hat and walked swiftly across the room, went out, closing the door softly behind her.

R. I. BEGINS RUM SALE DEC. 5

Providence, R. I., Nov. 24—The state alcoholic beverage commission has announced that Rhode Island will have distilled liquors, wine and beer stronger than 3.2 per cent for distribution and sale when repeal becomes effective Dec. 5.

License holders and individual citizens can have such beverages shipped into the state between now and repeal, but the beverages must be stored in a warehouse in care of the commission and imported through the commission.

Patrick P. Curran, commission chairman, has been notified by Dr. John M. Doran, chief of the bureau of industrial alcohol, U. S. Treasury department, that the commission's application for a permit for such shipments [illegible] had been granted.

$1,000,000 Maine Lottery Urged to Clear Debt

New York, Nov. 24 (I. S.)—State lotteries, outlawed in the United States for many years, loom in two states, Maryland and Maine, and are being discussed in others.

At Annapolis, Delegate Philip Wallace of Baltimore proposes to legalize state and city operated lotteries. The measure is said to have the support of Gov. Albert C. Ritchie as a revenue [illegible] measure.

The bill [illegible] the form of an amendment to the state constitution, which now bars lotteries.

In Augusta, Senator Frank [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] to push a similar measure in the Maine Legislature. He said:

"Maine is now $2,500,000 in the the hole and we have been called to Augusta to do something about it. A state lottery would solve the problem."

[illegible] believes that $1,000,000 worth of lottery tickets could be sold within the state in a month. Of these [illegible] his plan for $500,000 to be paid in prizes and used to defray the expenses of operation.

If these and other states legalize lotteries they will have to confine the sale of tickets within their own boundaries unless federal anti-lottery laws are repealed.

France re-established its national lottery this year, awarding [illegible] the grand prize, following the lead of other nations who have returned the [illegible].

Despite the [illegible] of postal [illegible] [illegible] tickets are sold [illegible] Americans [illegible] in Irish, Cuban, Chinese, Panamanian and other [illegible].

INSULL DEMAND SENT GREECE

Athens, Greece, Nov. 24 (AP)—It is understood here that the United States government has notified Greece in strong terms that means must be found to deport Samuel Insull, former Chicago utilities magnate.

The notification from Washington was understood to threaten reprisal in the event the deportation [illegible]. Insull is wanted on criminal charges in connection with the collapse of his utilities empire [illegible] not [illegible].

The Greek government was reported to be studying [illegible] how to fulfill the demand from the United States. Twice he has been declared not subject to extradition by court decision.

Heatless Coal for Everett Poor Starts Probe

[illegible] that heatless coal is being given to welfare recipients in Everett is made by Rev. Ulysses S. Milburn, chairman of the welfare [illegible] charges made in the board of aldermen.

More than 400 orders for fuel [illegible] welfare recipients have been [illegible] Rev. Dr. Milburn declares [illegible] of this number there have been eight complaints. He declares that the coal was purchased [illegible] to be distributed as [illegible] that it has long been [illegible] to the weather and that [illegible] may not be as fiery as [illegible] it is just as good [illegible] black stones and [illegible] charged.

Alderman George F. Pierce declares he visited many welfare homes, saw the stuff called coal, was unable to burn it and [illegible] ready to produce samples of the stuff for analysis at any time. [illegible] was backed up by Alderman J. Arthur Burke, who said some poor families had to go out and buy bags of coal when the welfare coal could not be burned.

As a result of the controversy, it is probable that an examination and analysis of the coal will be ordered.

Jehovah Witnesses Held for Sedition

Quebec, Que., Nov. 24—Six Montreal and Ontario members of a religious organization described as "witnesses of Jehovah" are being held for trial by Judge A. Fitzpatrick on seditious conspiracy charges. Charges against 22 others have been dismissed. Judgment in two remaining cases have been reserved.

Trial will be given the six accused at a session of the criminal assizes next Apr. They were released on bail.

MARRIAGE PACT IS DENIED

Trial of James J. Soltas, of Stamford, Ct., on a charge of larceny of $1700 from Miss Lena LeBlanc, 24, of Nashua, N. H., allegedly promising to marry her, resumes before Judge James C. Donnelly in Suffolk Superior Court today.

Soltas took the stand after Miss LeBlanc had testified regarding the manner in which she handed the money over to him. He denied telling her he was the owner of a silk company in Stamford and that he wanted it to buy material. He declared he told her he was manager of the company.

He also denied that he had promised to marry her, but admitted that they had discussed the subject. He testified Miss LeBlanc brought up the question and that he agreed to think about it. He also denied that he was married.

Yarmouth, N. S., Nov. 24 — It chugged and it coughed, and it snorted and it bumped—it might even have done a little huffing and puffing—as it struggled over the rocky roads of Seal Island, but at least it's theirs, and it's their first.

Forty pairs of eyes—that's all there are on this 10-square-mile island off the coast of Nova Scotia—were glued on "the thing," as it made its debut. And they loved it even though it was second-hand. It—was an auto.

N. E. COUNCIL URGED TO DEMAND SOUND DOLLAR

This Is Life

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

That man H. G. Wells, nearing 70, is still incorrigibly interested in the future. His latest, the fat volume entitled "The Shape of Things to Come" (Macmillan), is another attempt to peep into the future. This time not to imagine an ideal state solely, as in "A Modern Utopia," nor to make fiction out of the future as in "The Dream" and "Men Like Gods," but in an apparently sincere attempt to see what is going to happen in the next hundred or two years and the steps by which Wells' old love, the World State without discrimination of race color, nation, religion or caste, will come about.

Wells has always had a theory that if you try to analyze what you consider to be the most significant features of the present and then project them forward imaginatively into the future, with such modifications as seem likely to occur, you may possibly catch a glimpse of the future at least as valid as the glimpses we catch of the distant or pre-historic past by means of inscriptions, archaeological remains, legends and the like. The longer the view taken the less the likelihood of truth.

The result is that, whereas the parts of the book dealing with the World State of the year 2106, or thereabouts, are pretty vague and dull and unconvincing, the chapters dealing with the years 1933 to 1940 are fascinating and persuasive, and those from 1940 to 1960 (the end of the Hoover slump, as Wells insists on calling it) only less so.

For the next decade he outlines to us very carefully all the things that obviously exist around us that we are inclined to close our eyes to, and which we hope will somehow disappear by vague governmental measures, which at present we do not know enough to invent and would probably resist if they were put into practice.

He pictures a world in which available money and usable credit become more and more scarce with a consequent lowering of the standard of living the western world is accustomed to. He sees a lowering of health standards, a distinct increase in neuroses. He sees education getting clipped and scamped because society can no longer afford it on the pre-1929 level.

He sees racketeering, for instance, not a passing phase but a permanent business which will become a regular and accepted part of our business world. He sees a world in which weapons are used more freely than before in which peaceable citizens carry guns, in which automobiles tend to become bullet-proof, in which banks are highly armed and protected. He sees children and young people guarded by their parents to an extent we once should have deemed absurd.

These pages, I can assure you, are not amusing reading. They may be prophecy—and prophecy may go wrong—but they are prophecy based on existing facts and tendencies. You think to yourself:

"We like to pretend that this can't last. We like to think that the government and the police will take up the racketeer and the gangster in a serious way and wipe them out, as in that optimistic film, "Gabriel Over the White House"!

And then the thought comes to you:

"Suppose the government cannot or does not do it? Suppose the conditions, which we admit freely have been growing worse for a decade, and dreadfully worse in the past five years, are going to go on and increase? What then?"

And you go back to Wells' cool and lucid pages and you do not like them a little bit. He calls it "The Period of Frustration."

It is almost with relief that you go on to the war of 1940, which started accidently in the Polish Corridor between a Pole and a Nazi, involves the two countries and all their allies, and ends, after a decade, by impoverishing and exhausting the world, including China and Japan.

Then comes the Spotted Plague (compare the influenza of 1918 and the pneumonic plague of China about that time), which halves the population of the world; and then the swift, merciless decline into the new dark ages, the era of the Famished Fifties, which goes on till it reaches bottom in 1960, the end of the Hoover Slump, and recovery begins.

One doesn't mind that so much. It is all a little too pat, a bit too terrible. But the process that he describes in the Era of Frustration, which is simply an intensification of something you see going on all around you, on the front pages of every newspaper every day—that is tragic reading. Another example, if you want another, of the extraordinary power of that man, Wells, to collect all the available information, to throw on it the white light of his restless, searching, critical imagination and intelligence, and out of it to produce—synthetically, if you will—a picture that will linger with you longer than you like.

It's not pleasant reading—but it's worth reading.

YULE CHECKS IN HOLIDAY BANK DIVIDEND

26,000 Due for Checks From Closed Continental Bank

Official approval is expected from Washington in a short time for the payment of a 10 per cent dividend to some 26,000 depositors of the closed Boston-Continental National Bank.

Receiver James H. Brennan declared that the negotiations were under way for the payment of a $500,000 dividend to depositors and that he expected to have the checks well distributed before Christmas.

SECOND DIVIDEND

The distribution of the $500,000 will mark the second dividend payment by the closed institution. A first dividend of 20 per cent amounting to $1,000,000 was paid nearly a year ago.

Receiver Brennan said he had been devoting his efforts since his appointment last September to securing the payment of this dividend before Christmas. He said he would make a public announcement to inform depositors definitely regarding the dividend as soon as official approval was given in Washington.

He said he had communicated with the office of the Comptroller of Currency in Washington to secure the necessary approval and authority. The mailing of checks will be started as soon as this is received he said.

HOLIDAY JOYS

This announcement, coming on the heels of Wednesday's report that 33,000 depositors of the closed Federal National Bank would receive a 10 per cent dividend before Christmas, will provide added holiday joy in the homes of some 59,000 depositors in the two closed institutions.

The Boston-Continental National Bank was closed Dec 17 1931.

Store Owner Beaten by Waltham Bandit

Peter N. Hanson, 58, proprietor of a fruit store in Adams st., Waltham, was recovering today from a bad gash on the head, inflicted with a gun butt by a holdup man when Hanson struck him with a milk bottle in an attempt to save $2.50. The bandit is being sought by Waltham police.

$8,000,000 in Christmas Clubs Here

There are at least 181,000 Massachusetts citizens who will believe in Santa Claus this Christmas. They are the mutual savings banks depositors who are about to receive an average of $44 each from their Christmas savings clubs, or a total of about $8,000,000.

These figures were announced today by the Savings Banks Association of Massachusetts in its offices in Federal st. They revealed that Boston and its metropolitan area had by far the largest number of these accounts. They total $1,618,500. Worcester was second with $485,000; Lowell third with $253,000.

Total figures for the 18 states in which mutual institutions operate will amount to about $31,000,000, it was said. Massachusetts stands second only to New York in this list. The Empire State banks will pay 323,270 depositors a total of $13,053,644.

RADIO CATCHES AUTO THIEVES

Another victory was scored for radio when Winchester police captured four of five youths alleged to have stolen the auto of Walter Douglas of Boston ave. Somerville in Medford sq., 30 minutes after Arlington police sent the warning over the radio.

The quartet rounded up after they had crashed the stolen machine at the Swanton st. bridge in a chase by Winchester police gave their names as William Smeedy 19, of Crescent st., Somerville; William Mason, 15, of Pa[illegible] st.; Thomas Howel 17, of Mystic st. and Joseph McCarthy 21, of Oxford st., all of Charlestown. They will be arraigned in Malden court today. The fifth youth is being sought.

The radio report of the stolen machine was sent out by Arlington police at 8:21 p. m. and picked up by two Winchester officers in a cruising car at Winchester sq. Three minutes later they saw the machine and gave chase. After a mile chase the stolen car crashed and the officers rounded up four of the five youths.

Football Fans to Get Cool Weather

This month's temperature has averaged five degrees below normal and is one of the coldest Novembers in 60 years, according to figures given out at the weather bureau today.

Over the 60-year span the only years ranking with this for November frigidity are 1873, 1880, 1891, 1901 and 1904. Each was as cold, but no colder, than this month. The minimum temperature last night was 25 and as the mercury rose slowly, the weather man predicted some rain this evening, but clear and colder tomorrow for the football fans.

ELY APPROVES CHANGES IN MILK CODE

Joins With Other N. E. Governors in a Plea for Amendments

Gov. Ely today joined with the five other New England governors in approving changes proposed in the milk code for New England states, prepared by the New England Governors' Milk Advisory Board.

Announcement of the Ely acceptance was made by James O'Brien of Lee, a member of the Advisory Board, who said the amendments to the code will be submitted to Frederick S. Snyder, New England milk administrator, turned over by his advisory committee and then forwarded to Washington for approval.

"The governors," declared the O'Brien statement, "at a meeting with their advisory board, considered the milk marketing agreement for the Boston area in its broader aspect and application to the New England situation as a whole.

MANY NEW PROPOSALS

"Time did not permit complete consideration of all proposals—of amendments particularly and some of less importance—and those affecting individual states or more local situations.

"Changes embodying the following principles were agreed upon as fundamental and desirable:

"1. Deductions for transportation, station charges, weighing and testing and use of can must not be more than the reasonable and actual cost thereof.

"2. Differentials for payment for butter fat above or below the base of 3.7 per cent must be revised so as to be equitable to producers of both low and high-test milk and to all distributors.

"3. Disputes arising through the rejection of milk because of quality must be settled by state authorities without forcing the producers to appeal for relief to the Secretary of Agriculture at Washington.

BONUS PROVISIONS

"4—Territorial limits should be revised, particularly as regards districts in eastern Massachusetts.

"5—The marketing plan should be studied and revised to provide more equitable ratings and bases to producers.

"6—An equitable differential in price to consumers, based on actual distributing costs of the two systems must be established between the bona fide cash and carry and home delivered milk.

"7—Provision that Grade A Premium shall be revised, and insure that not less than one half of premium paid by the consumer shall be returned as a bonus to the producer.

"8—Provision that producers of special brands shall be paid a bonus of not less than one-half of the extra premium paid by the consumer."

SEES NEW MILK PLAN

The New England milk industry may become a regulated public utility unless present efforts succeed in stabilizing the market and controlling classes of milk and prices, Prof. R. B. Corbett of Rhode Island State College declared.

"There is a probability that control will supplant co-operation; that milk directors, boards of arbitration, and committees will take over the functions of price making and the decisions on marketing practices," he further declared.

"Freedom of co-operative effort among milk producers may disappear. As a result, the co-operative associations may become largely educational in function, with the possibility of becoming highly articulate if things appear to be mismanaged."

Judge of Good Liquor Vows to Make No More Buys

James Smith, of California st. Newton, swore a mighty vow today that he would never again make an illegal purchase of liquor, even to do a favor for a supposed friend.

Smith was found not guilty by a jury in Middlesex Court of keeping and exposing liquor for sale and with illegal sale of liquor last Oct. 10. The chief witness against him was Mrs. Samantha Jones of Olcott st. Watertown, while his star witness was her husband, William Jones.

It was brought out in evidence that Jones did considerable drinking at Smith's home, but both maintained it was plain hospitality and that no money was exchanged. Mrs. Jones, testimony revealed, thought otherwise and went there with a police officer to buy some liquor for a supposed party. Smith told them he had none but knew where he could get it and offered to do so as a favor. They handed him the money, he went out and returned with the liquor, only to be arrested. The jury found him not guilty in 10 minutes of deliberation.

ELECTION COST REPORTS LAG

Only ten of the 122 candidates whose names appeared on the ballot in the recent city election have filed expense returns at City Hall. City Clerk Wilfred J. Doyle will notify the remaining candidates to file without delay unless they wish to be reported to the attorney general.

In the returns filed thus far, it was revealed that Judge Michael H. Sullivan expended $2880, of which he donated $1000 himself, in his mayoralty contest. Treasurer [illegible] Shattuck of Harvard reported he expended nothing on his [illegible]ful campaign for City Council in Ward 5, Back Bay.

Under the election laws individuals are given two weeks and political committees a full month after the election to record at City Hall the contributions they received and the expenditures they made during the campaign.

THREAT NOTE IS TRACED TO BOY

Cambridge police today said they had learned the identity of a boy who tossed a purse, containing a black-hand note, onto the piazza of a house in Howland st.

They said that the purse belonged to Miss Alice Benbow of Calder st., Dorchester and had been stolen from the hallway of the house when she was visiting there.

The finding of the note caused considerable excitement in the neighborhood. Police investigated and learned that the pocketbook containing $9.75 had been stolen Wednesday evening. They also learned that the boy had been a visitor at the house.

Further probing revealed that the boy and several companions had bought large amounts of candy and ice cream in a nearby store after the pocketbook disappeared. Police then deduced the black-hand note was a childish effort to cover the theft.

Thousands Left in Will to Scientists

The will of Mrs. Helen B. Farrett of Ipswich which leaves her $11,000 realty holdings in Ipswich and Hamilton in trust for the benefit of members of the Christian Science Church of which she was a teacher has been allowed in Salem Probate Court by Judge Harry R. Dow.

According to the will Christian Scientists "who may need a quiet place in which to work out some problem" are to have the exclusive use of her estate.

U. S. MONETARY POLICY FLAYED BY SENATOR

Prof. Cabot Gives the NRA Chiefs "Go Slow" Signal

The monetary policy of the Administration was [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] of the ninth New England Conference [illegible] Hotel [illegible].

"Stop experimenting with the currency, and return to an honest dollar backed by gold," declared U. S. Sen. Frederic C. Walcott, of Connecticut.

The conference [illegible] before it a [illegible] of the New England Council [illegible] upon President Roosevelt the importance of "stabilizing our currency and foreign exchange at the earliest practicable moment, thereby restoring to the business community a fixed measure of monetary value."

CABOT SOUNDS WARNING

At the same time the U. S. Recovery Administration was given [illegible] signal by Prof. Philip Cabot of Harvard. He declared the recovery administration was attempting [illegible] the natural [illegible] of supply and demand and predicted that bureaucracy will be rampant if the NRA proceeds [illegible] present.

Sen. Walcott declared the resort to the printing press advocated by some as a means of retiring government bonds as "fundamentally [illegible] and [illegible]."

"The entire theory of inflation," he said, "is based upon a misconception of the operation of our financial system."

He pointed to the collapse of Germany ten years ago when the cost of a loaf of bread rose to more than a million marks.

CLICKETY, CLICK GO KNITTING NEEDLES -:- ABANDONING FLAT-CHESTED SILHOUETTE

Anny Blatt Knit Her Way to Fame

By Victoria Gaines

WOMEN ARE TENDING to their knitting again. Smart shops are opening hand knit departments, radio stations are broadcasting knitting instructions and at the smartest bridge parties women calmly take out their knitting and purl 1, knit 2 between rubbers. At the head of the hand-knit movement is Anny Blatt, who sewed the first stitches so to speak, and is now reaping the rewards—and the profits. She has recently arrived in New York to supervise the launching of her collection in one of our smartest sports shops.

Knits for Parisiennes

Anny Blatt is the Frenchwoman who [illegible] her way into fame. She [illegible] and ended up [illegible] was [illegible] into knitted [illegible] thing no [illegible] erto been able [illegible] her clothes that [illegible] worn [illegible] Lady So-and-so in the rotogravure photographs from the Riviera, and rumor reports that the indomitable Anny will even impart a few fancy stitches to the First Lady, Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, while she is here.

Not that the Anny Blatt knits bear any more resemblance to grandmother's [illegible] than Anny herself does to a gray-haired grandma. Anny is a crisp, vivacious person, whose needles click no faster than her tongue. To her there is nothing "home-made" about hand knit clothes—she believes that they are as much an art as any grand couture creation. Her knitted costumes are as carefully constructed as any fabric model, they are joined and seamed with consummate skill. Unlike most knitted things which become as shapeless as an empty flour sack in time, Anny Blatt's knitwear always fits like a [illegible] skin.

FANTASTIC

Her stitches are all her own too. They're fantastic-looking affairs, most of them, that somehow manage to look smart in the final result. Sometimes she invents special stitches, just as the one that looks like a woven fabric when it is finished. To do tricks like this she drives the yarn manufacturer mad with specially designed yarns which they endure patiently, knowing that Anny will then produce something sensationally beautiful.

Not satisfied designing her own yarns and clothes, Anny also has her dyes made to order—lusciously lovely colors that look as though they'd been touched by the Riviera sun. In her establishment in Paris she has dyers, weavers, knitters—all at work concocting new colors, blends and yarns for her. Knitting, as practiced by Anny Blatt, has come a long way from the old-fashioned womanly art. It's definitely big business now.

The Marry-Go-Round

Love—Other Trifles

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE FACT that a man has a perfectly good wife at home never seems to make a modern girl doubt that his heart is free and his intentions are serious.

Helen Rowland

This is the time of year when a woman with plenty of money buys a lot of smart clothes, so that she can go down to Florida and loll around all day in a [illegible] bathing suit.

The day always comes when a popular bachelor tires of women, conquests and flirtations; but a married Don Juan never knows when the love game is over.

Between love affairs a girl has that odd feeling that all the clocks in the world have stopped, and that she is just marking time and waiting for something to happen.

* * *

One reason why the telephone has taken the place of the love letter is because the modern man figures that if he never writes a love letter he [illegible] write a heart balm check.

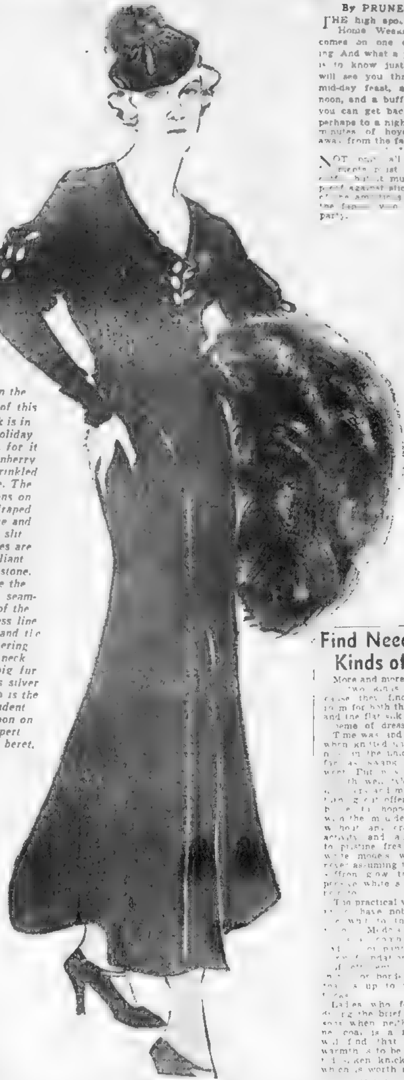
Dressing For Holiday Turkeys



Even the color of this frock is in the holiday spirit, for it is cranberry red crinkled crepe. The buttons on the draped bodice and the slit sleeves are brilliant rhinestone. Note the clever seaming of the princess line skirt, and the flattering low neck. The big fur cape is silver fox; so is the impudent pompon on the pert velvet beret.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

THE high spot of all the Old Home Weeks in any year comes on one day—Thanksgiving. And what a problem it often is to know just what costume will see you through a formal mid-day feast, a drowsy afternoon, and a buffet nibble before you can get back to town, and perhaps to a night club for a few minutes of hoydenish fun far away from the family circle!

NOT only all these requirements must be met by one outfit, but it must also be foolproof against sticky little fingers of the ambitious lap crawlers in the family who must be at the party.

So what we want is an afternoon gown of some stuff that does not spot or crumple easily and which nevertheless looks festive.

ROUGH crepe is swell, waterproofed or touched a bit with lame is another good bet; and a handsome suit with a luxurious blouse is third idea. Models like these are dressy but they behave well under a coat for the trip to the old homestead and they can take a lot of punishment indoors.

Find Need for Two Kinds of Undies

More and more women are buying two kinds of lingerie, because they find that there is room for both the knitted models and the flat silk pretties in their scheme of dressing.

Time was and not so long ago, when knitted underwear was almost in the union suit class, as far as swank and femininity went. But now the dull luster, [illegible] the well styled numbers that [illegible] and manufacturers are [illegible] offer great possibilities [illegible] shoppers. They go on with the moulded line, stay put without any crawly feeling or activity and launder in a jiffy to pristine freshness. Even the white models wash beautifully, never assuming that patched and [illegible] glow that many inexpensive white silk garments are heir to.

The practical virtues of knitted [illegible] have not been sacrificed [illegible] to their fash[illegible]. Models that [illegible] combination bras [illegible] panties are just the [illegible] foundations that [illegible] [illegible] or borders [illegible] up to very [illegible].

Ladies who feel a bit chilly during the brief and blessed seasons when neither ice nor cannel coal is a major heartache will find that quite a bit of warmth is to be had out of knitted silken knickerbockers, a tip which is worth investigating.

Exercise if You Wish More Curves

By Therese Deschamps

Curves ahead!

Since Mae West made curves fashionable once more, we have been almost buried under a pile of letters from many of you who want to abandon the flat-chested silhouette in favor of bigger and better curves.

We don't blame you a bit! What with clothes getting more and more sheathlike every day, it IS discouraging business trying to look feminine without a softly rounded bust. Practically impossible, we'd say.

Flat chest lines often are partly due to faulty posture, y'know. 'Fess up, now, do you stand up straight? You really must.

DON'T SLUMP! Hold your chest up proudly, with your shoulders back and down . . . and keep the tummy flat. Then glance into the mirror and see how much "chestier" you look already.

How about your weight? There may be [illegible]. If you are under par in weight, a general plumping up may help to add a curve here . . . and there.

Eat plenty of nourishing food, second helpings 'n' everything. Get enough sleep and rest. Don't worry about anything . . . even curves. And take some vigorous outdoor exercise every day which will make you breathe deeply.

Swimming, bowling and brisk dumbbell swinging (look out for the chandeliers) are all good bust and chest developing exercises.

To help you, we have worked out a new leaflet of special deep-breathing and other simple chest and bust developing exercises. If you will do them faithfully, we know they will help you. But don't forget Rome wasn't built in a day! You mustn't expect miraculous overnight results.

Return to Magnificence

Until this year, Europe has been the only source of exquisitely hand-cut rock crystal goblets of the family heirloom class. These we present as proud specimens of American skill and handiwork—fashioned of solid crystal, with brilliant and intricate hand cutting. "Cadence," is the name of the tall goblet on the right. Its stem twirls upward on a gradually rising note—hence the name. The bowl and a single ball in the stem are of a deep color. "Intaglio," the middle goblet, has an Italian Renaissance motif, and "Wallingford" is the one on the right.

Thanksgiving Fixings Get Attention

By Martha Lee

Coming over to the Food Karnival tomorrow afternoon to visit with me at half past two? There will be some special Thanksgiving fixings prepared and given away as prizes to fortunate guests and I am hoping that we will break the attendance record [illegible] for the karnival [illegible].

[illegible] extra [illegible] there is no secret about some of the specials we made in cooking class this week here at 5 Winthrop sq.

SAVORY SQUASH

3 cups squash	2½ cups bread crumbs
½ cup milk
1 egg	1 tsp. salt
½ tsp. pepper	1 tsp. onion juice
Diced bacon

Beat the egg until light, add milk and mix with the crumbs, to which have been added the onion juice, salt and pepper. Allow a slice of bacon to each person, and fry, adding 2 tbsps. of bacon fat to the squash. Butter a baking dish. Mix the crumb mixture with the squash. Strew with some dry bread crumbs mixed with a little bacon fat and bake till brown in a 500 deg. F. oven. For serving garnish with bacon.

JELLIED LIME SALAD

1 pkg. lime jello
1 cup boiling water
1 cup grated cucumber
1 tbsp. vinegar
1 tsp. onion
[illegible] tsp. salt
Dash of cayenne

Dissolve jello in boiling water. Add remaining ingredients. Force through sieve. Turn into mold. Chill until firm. Cut in squares and serve on crisp lettuce. Garnish with mayonnaise or Russian dressing. Serves six.

Daily Suggestion for Self-Improvement

Are you a "chair slumper"? Don't get into the habit of slumping over your desk. This practice will ruin your figure no matter how good it may be. When the shoulders droop forward, back muscles go limp and the stomach protrudes.

PANDORA TELLS YOU

DEAR PANDORA:

games and [illegible] is one of my greatest joys to see my Alma Mater in its weekly fight for glory . . . not essentially because I am a football [illegible] [illegible] the pageant of [illegible] [illegible] it's much more fun and [illegible] I look at it it's a swell chance for her to get a breath of good fresh air. But will she go? Yes, if it's so hot you want to take your coat and vest off, or if there are a series of parties before and after that [illegible] [illegible] conservatory. I can't get my wife to even listen to the game over the radio. How can I arouse her enthusiasm, or what methods should I use to make her enjoy one thing that I DO like?

LEFT END

DEAR LEFT END . . .

I don't believe that there's much YOU can do to make her really enjoy football, and as for arousing her enthusiasm [illegible] seems to be impossible. All [illegible] the point of the game to a woman she'll be crazy about seeing it is downright silly. In the first place a woman wouldn't listen to you long enough nor intently enough to really get a chance to understand, and in the second place she'd never fully get onto the thing, anyway, unless she has real interest in the game. [illegible] My suggestion [illegible] be to get a sufficient amount of warm clothing [illegible] ridiculous, bundle her up and give her a chance to see the game from the point of view of a spectator and not as a snow man. Women when thawed out are a great deal more agreeable . . . no icy remarks or cold shoulders. A fur coat, two layers of blankets, a hot water bottle and overshoes may help. Try it, anyway. If that doesn't work I suggest that you go along about your athletic business alone.

PANDORA.

Every Day This Week

IMPORTANT!

One important thing to remember in buying a bran product for the relief of constipation — is to look at the label. The Food and Drug Administration has advised that bran products should state clearly on the package just what they contain.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN — because it is all bran with only flavor added, gives you the generous amount of "bulk" needed to promote proper elimination.

"We kept well last winter"

THOUSANDS of people "kept on the sunny side of life" last winter. They kept themselves free from common constipation — the ailment that so frequently tears down resistance to "colds" and other winter infections.

Stand guard over the health of your family this winter. Correct common constipation the safe way — by proper diet. Serve them frequently with a delicious cereal.

Laboratory tests show Kellogg's ALL-BRAN supplies "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to further aid regularity. The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in leafy vegetables. ALL-BRAN is also rich in blood-building iron.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. With each meal in severe cases. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Serve ALL-BRAN with milk or cream, or cook into muffins, omelets, breads, etc. Sold by all grocers, in the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Keep on the sunny side of life

THE PRESENT TREND IS FOR PIGGER and better parties . . . we have never had the pleasure of attending a more festive affair than Miss Polly Cotter's presentation last evening, the elegance of the arrangements, the gay atmosphere, the brilliant gathering of young people make it one of the outstanding balls of the season.

The ushers' dinner at the magnificent home of the debutante's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Shea of Dedham, was a dinner party to remember . . . twenty-four of the young smart set were seated in the white and silver dining-room around a long oval table, resplendent with silver candelabra and blush pink roses on a rare lace cloth. Perfectly trained butlers served a delicious feast (may we add that butlers, perfectly trained, are worthy of mention in these times, when informality covers too often carelessness and sloth), and the young bud's health was drank in sparkling champagne.

MRS. RICHARD COTTER

Miss Cotter was lovely in a rare robin's egg blue satin, the skirt a layer of tiers of silver and blue beads sophisticated, but marvelously chic. It was purchased in Paris last season when the Cotters were in Europe and you just felt that some of the joy of gay Paree was hidden in its folds. Tall slim and dark, Miss Polly sat at the head of the table with the handsome Al Dillingham on the one hand and Jimmie Gardiner on the other, her cousin, Miss Barbara McDonnell, a pretty brunette in white satin, nearby. A bevy of this season's debutantes and Harvard swains completed a merry picture . . .

Mrs. H. E. McDonnell, mother of the attractive Barbara, who had motored on from Pittsburgh for the occasion of her niece's debut, was distinque in black velvet with snowy gardenias.

Mrs. Cotter was girlish in pink satin on long slim lines, with corsage of lavender orchids . . . she and her daughter received at the Hotel Somerset, where the ball was given in the Princess ballroom, before a tapestry of ferns and pink roses.

French Creation Worn by Mrs. Shea

IN A SMART FRENCH CREATION, Mrs. Shea was gowned in white satin of intricate cut, with large bow of tangerine velvet on the shoulder. Quite Parisian in appearance and temperament, Mrs. Shea was a charming hostess, the degree of formality and hospitality shown by Mr. and Mrs. Shea was simply delightful. Even the young people were impressed—and when youth is impressed these days, a party MUST be extraordinary.

One of the most attractive debs to attend the dinner was petite Virginia Wells, a darling in black velvet with diamante girdle and shoulder straps . . . we saw her dancing in the arms of R. Morton Claflin and looking very contented . . .

Phyllis DuPont wore a feather leu and jolly Ursula Coues garlanded her coral frock with brown blossoms . . .

Tall and stately in rust red velvet, Susan Means enjoyed the evening . . . and Lee Marston, squired by the good-looking Ben Foss, Jr., wore the so becoming violet blue crepe . . .

Black Velvet and Ermine

PHYLLIS FORBES, IN BLACK VELVET and ermine wrap over a coral crepe dress, did not lack dancing partners . . . and adorable Camilla Alsop was just that in a turquoise blue crepe with quilted ephilets and peplum, a cunning dress on a cute girl.

Tall, blonde and Junoesque, Barbraa Lane's blonde tresses were enhanced by her violet blue gown and Marian Moffat was dainty in white with touches of scarlet . . .

An interesting girl who will make her bow this week is Astrid Rice . . . her black velvet frock with diamante straps did not hide her rare sense of humor . . .

Peggy Barton, from Worcester, one of THE Bartons, was in blue satin and Marian Wood, tall, blonde and remote looking, was in a brilliant red with crystal bugles around the neckline over which she wore a lovely evening wrap of black velvet with collar and cuffs of snowy ermine . . .

Gown of Turquoise Blue Crepe

Mary J. Dewey

Demure but Jolly Mary Jane Dewey wore an old fashioned silk of emerald green and gold, bouffant in style, and pretty blonde Ann Wicks chose the light blue sation to set off her light hair . . .

Kay Keville was chic in red and gold and Charlotte Bouton was attired in the white and silver, so pure and glittering . . . Marjorie Grant also selected white for her evening costume and lovely Polly Paine (a deb of two season's ago, she confided charmingly to us) had a light blue satin trimmed with red fox, unique and effective.

Spanning Fifty-Eight Years of Harvard and Yale Football Games ↕ The Build Up to $1.40 Per From Small Beginnings

By AUSTEN LAKE

From an old newsfile of Nov. 7, 1875:

"Sometime after lunch tomorrow afternoon the flower of Yale's and Harvard's young manhood will stroll over to the University playing field, in high spirit, for a game of football. Both sides will be costumed becomingly in tights and their university colors, blue for Yale and crimson for Harvard. There will be horn music and united shouting by friends and old boys, many of whom have come from out of town for the gala occasion and promise to stay overnight for the sake of renewing old associations. Admission will be charged at the field entrance."

And so, my friends, amid more horn music and united shouting, there will be another Harvard and Yale football game tomorrow, though there has not been much about it in the daily papers, because the game will virtually be played in private before a mere fifty thousand. And limited interest has confined press arrangements to a handful of 256 working journalists with attendent telegraphers, radio specialists and photographers. It is scarcely worth mentioning

Certainly there is something quite wonderful about this. For the 50,000 who have eagerly paid a flat $4.40 each, including pleasure tax, to roost uncomfortably on the Stadium bevels know perfectly well that they are going to see two stock model college elevens play grabs with a leather, wind-filled bag for nothing more than a vague, family glory. There is not even a plated mug at stake. But the crowd will, none the less, make delirious outcry at almost every commonplace move of the players on the turf below and think nothing of scaling a shower of $10 derbies into the Stadium drafts.

Harvard-Yale the Aristocrat of Football Games

It is futile to dwell on this phenomenon because few of our sport illusions will stand examination before the New York Yacht Club's executive committee would be saying, "Well, it IS silly to spent five million dollars on a fleet of cup contenders, just to defend a plated mug that would not bring 50 bucks in a hock shop." And Boston's major league fans might turn suddenly practical and decide they have been frenzied too long about ball players who hail from the Southern canebrake or the Pennsylvania coal regions and have no sentimental regard for this city, other than a salary source.

So it detracts no whit from the aristocracy of the Harvard-Yale game to point out that the same H-Y players, mustered in different livery at Fenway Park with names like the Nutmeg Slashers and the Kendall Square Tornados, would not draw a coroner's jury at 25c, 50c and $1. Because "Harvard and Yale" has become a national figure of speech, familiar to every small town lad who plays with rag-bundle ball and, on the back pastures of home heath, challenges imaginative heroes with "Ready Harvard? Ready Yale?"

Man is used more by words than he uses them, such as the awful significance of Love, Honor, and Obey. So that in a way the Harvard-Yale game is encrusted with a tinsely glamour and reeks of such sentimental odors as burning leaves and old cedar shavings. Former players, with glistening pates and a fringe of thin hair, will come hundreds of miles to take their places with a conscious dignity on the sideline benches, feeling that the crowd is muttering, one to another: "There goes Joe Wiper, the old Harvard tackle."

Personally I prefer my big game crowds a little less decorous than those of the Harvard Yale game, because I spring from a rugged college setting in the Lehigh Valley where Lafayette and Lehigh used to take their annual game with greater emotional depth. And, at one time, it was a sort of ritual form that the host side of the crowd would chase the guest side down the hill to their special trains after the final whistle, speeding their departure with a shower of vegetable matter.

On the Decadence of Student Life

It was a convention that was enjoyed by pursuers and pursued alike and I believe the old sons of Lehigh would have felt chagrined and snubbed if Lafayette's students had trudged apathetically off the field and gone to evening tea dances, as I am told they do now. The student legends were enriched by those annual happenings, while the graduates carried them away as happy relics of their hobnail, corduroy lives in college, undoubtedly retelling them with vast relish to their children in later life

It seems that student life of our day has become decadent, so that Harvard no longer observes Bloody Monday and the Technology students no longer rip up theater upholstering and throw it at the actors during Tech Night. We are entering into an era of woeful good manners, which we old battle nags are viewing with alarm. There is some hint of revival in the goal post riots it is true, though even there some of the schools are taking to smearing the posts with fresh paint to discourage the lads from fracturing their collar bones and barking each other's chins.

So, tomorrow there will be more horn music and united shouting at Soldiers Field and some of the old boys and their friends, many of whom have come from out of town for the gala occasion promise to stay over night for the sake of renewing old associations. Admission will be charged at the field entrance.

'Has Anybody Here Seen—'

Well, some 50,000 Stadium fans will have an answer for the old song, "Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly?" tomorrow. Shaun Kelly, Harvard's ace wingman, will be the only sophomore on the Crimson squad to start against Yale in the 52nd grid classic.

Passing the Puck

By BILL GRIMES

The Bruins ran their string of straight wins to three by shutting out the Red Wings, 6 to 0, last night in Detroit. The Wings do not lose many games on Olympia ice and they have never been so humiliated before a home crowd.

Although the skeptics classified Art Ross' explanation of the Bruins' poor start as an alibi, there must have been something to the story. Ross set up the claim that the Bruins were below standard because they trained on a small skating surface and then open on two of the biggest, Toronto and Montreal. Ross predicted that after a week on Garden ice his charges would round into form and that is just what they have done.

Capt. Marty Barry and Joe Lamb had a banner night in Detroit, each scoring three goals. Capt. Barry's comeback was more or less of a surprise for he was in poor physical condition, due to a heavy cold, leaving for the West.

While the scoring honors went to Capt. Barry and Joe Lamb, Nels Stewart and Bob Gracie picked up a couple of assists, and Dit Clapper and Red Beattie were each credited with one assist.

Maury Roberts, the Somerville boy, was in the net for the Americans last night, and turned in a fine performance. The Amerks' defense failed Roberts on many occasions and on two of them, Paul Thompson and Art Coulter scored for the Hawks.

After getting their two tallies, the Blackhawks packed the defense and the fans howled for action. It was a drab affair, during which only two penalties were called and they came in the third period.

Pinky Davie is back with the Bruin Cubs and will be played at right wing against the Philadelphia Arrows tomorrow night at the Garden. Last year, Davie struggled to become a defense man but to no great success and Manager Art Ross is of the opinion that he will eventually develop into a winger.

Gerald Carson, the veteran defense man, has insured his stay with Les Canadiens for at least another month, for he scored the only goal last night in the Forum and the Flying Frenchmen stepped into first place in the Canadien Division at the expense of Ottawa, which was, incidentally, the fifth straight defeat for the Senators.

Princeton, Yale Abandon Non-Scouting Agreement

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 24 (AP) Princeton and Yale have decided to abandon their football non scouting agreement, in force since 1926

While Princeton authorities were content simply to announce that the agreement, would be terminated by mutual consent at the end of the present season, Tad Jones said at New Haven he was "sorry to see it go by the boards."

Jones was head coach at Yale when he and Bill Roper, then Princeton's mentor, reached an informal agreement in 1926 not to scout each other's teams.

BERGER OUT APPENDIX, H-Y SEAT

Wally Berger, Braves outfielding hero, whose home run with the bases full on the last day of the season, gave the Braves fourth place and a division of the world series spoils, had his appendix removed by Dr. M. E. McGarty, club surgeon, at St. Elizabeth's Hospital early today.

After the operation Dr. McGarty said the patient was "doing fine and resting comfortably," but was not to be distrubed today. Berger will be able to leave the hospital within 10 days.

Berger will spend the winter in Florida, instead of returning to his California home, and his only statement this morning was that he wished things had held up so he could have used his Harvard-Yale tickets tomorrow.

BABE PASSES UP NEWARK BERTH

Newark, N. J. Nov. 24—Babe Ruth will not be manager of the Newark Bears for any number of good reasons, George Weiss, spokesman for Col. Jake Ruppert, indicated today.

"He'd have to be waived out of both leagues, first," said Weiss.

Weiss also indicated that the Bam has not even heard of his "appointment" himself yet.

Two and possibly three major league cities have been mentioned in connection with Ruth's ambition to end his baseball days as a manager. It is not likely therefore that George Herman would accept the post left unoccupied by the retirement of Al Mameaux.

The day may come, Weiss ruminated, when Babe would occupy the position now held by Marse Joe McCarthy as pilot of the Yankees. Joe has two years yet to go. Ruth might land a major league berth for training purposes as a manager and then move back to New York. In about 1936, say.

Crimson Has Edge For Grid Classic In Stadium

By WALTER KILEY

A spirit of confidence developed within the past 48 hours radiates through the entire Harvard football squad and its personnel of coaches, as the Crimson tapers off for its final, all-important, 52d annual game with Yale at the Stadium tomorrow afternoon.

Of cause unknown, in spite of even money wagering, this sense of security has even seeped its way into the undergraduate body who look to witness the Harvards win their first game from Eli since 1930.

It is evident that the Crimson's recent showing against Brown has much to do with it.

LITMAN STARTS

Head Coach Eddie Casey, after weeks of experimentation seems to have finally discovered his most potent backfield combination. The quartet of Bob Haley at quarterback, Danny Wells and Chet Litman at the halfback posts and Johnny Dean, captain and fullback, gave testimony in the Army and Brown games that the Yales were to face a busy afternoon defensively.

ARMY-NAVY TEAMS AWAIT WHISTLE

MIDDIES' COACH SEES VICTORY OVER CADETS

Philadelphia, Nov. 24 (AP)—Preparations for another Army-Navy game, one of football's most colorful spectacles, moved into the final stage today with both service elevens in the "war zone."

They arrived last night, the Navy men going direct to the Manufacturers' Country Club at suburban Jenkintown, and Army detraining at Camden, N. J., later going to Pine Valley Golf Club near Clementon.

Unbeaten and untied, the Army "mules" get a secret workout on the battleground, the University of Pennsylvania [illegible] today but Navy [illegible] location from [illegible] planned a final practice on the golf course.

Lieut. Gar Davidson, Army mentor, says his team is in good shape, expects to win but is ready for a stiff battle.

"Army respects the Navy's power," he said. "Then, it's Navy's last game, and they can give all they've got while Army must not forget it's game with Notre Dame."

Stadium Sellout Now Unlikely

For the first time in recent Harvard-Yale history the Stadium will fall short of a sellout. Up to this morning there were less than 4[illegible],000 tickets disposed of with a probable attendance of 50,000 anticipated, 8000 less than capacity. Last year there were only 15,000 at the Bowl.

Wrestling Results

At Pittsburgh—Gino Garibaldi, 213, [illegible], threw Yanka Zeleznjak, 225, Russia, 30:00.

Lynn—Bob McCoy, Cambridge, defeated Harry Lundin, New York, two out of three falls.

St. Louis—Ray Steele, 218, California, threw John Pesek, 132, Nebraska, [illegible].

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

VINCE DUNDEE, world's middleweight champion, has opened training quarters at Madame Beye's camp at Summit, N. J., and started to get into condition for his 15-round title defense battle with Andy Callahan of Lawrence at the Boston Garden on December 8.

"Mr. Boston"

"Dundee has been at Madame Beye's camp since Monday," writes Max Waxman. "He plans a hard session of training, as he is anxious to score a decisive victory when he battles Callahan in Boston.

"I have made arrangements to get five or six first class sparring partners for Dundee. I am particularly anxious to get rugged sparmates, as I want Vince to tune up his punch. I would like to see him stop Callahan."

Famous Training Camp

THERE IS plenty of middleweight tradition around Madame Beye's training camp. I first visited the place to see Johnny Wilson train for his second [illegible] with Harry Greb. The camp was later used by Mickey Walker when the latter was middleweight boss. The camp [illegible] situated in a wooded section and [illegible] an ideal spot for an athlete desiring to get into perfect condition.

Damon Runyon, who spends much of his time in the [illegible], [illegible] Francis Ethier, has been known to hide away at Madame Beye's place for a month or a week at a time. The [illegible] of the place enables one to [illegible] and forget about the roar of the city.

Dundee should be prepared to step at a terrific pace when he collides with Callahan.

Epsom Downs Racing

LOU SMITH will open his new race track, Epsom Downs, at Houston, Tex., on Thanksgiving Day. There will be 27 days of racing, and if the meeting is as successful as the ones at Rockingham Park the energetic Lou Smith will be satisfied.

Eddie Mack is at Epsom Downs in charge of publicity. Mack did such a splendid job promoting Rockingham Park that Smith took him to Texas with him.

Smith and Mack will later entrench at Tropical Park, Miami, Fla., where two meetings will be held, the first starting late in December and the second opening in March.

The Hialeah meeting will be sandwiched in between the Tropical Park events. Hialeah, as usual, has received the choice dates. This track will open on January 25 and will be in operation through February, which is the height of the Florida season.

Florida Faces New Boom

BILL MORGAN, Boston advertising man, [illegible] returned from Miami. He [illegible] have a [illegible] there for the winter. Florida look[illegible] for the [illegible] it has had since [illegible] boom days. It promises not to boost prices during January and February as has been its custom the past.

One of the reasons for the great success of the Chicago Fair was the fact the hotels did not increase their normal rates. Tourists left Chicago praising the city for the fine treatment that had been accorded to them.

Florida is an ideal winter playground and will attract thousands of tourists if it doesn't attempt to put on a heavy tariff.

The difficulties in Cuba have a tendency to boom Florida.

Last winter there was good business in Florida. People forgot all about the depression as they basked in the warm Florida sunshine.

JAYVEE ELEVENS' OPEN H-Y GRID RIVALRY

Harvard and Yale junior varsity football teams will meet at Soldiers Field this afternoon at 2:15 in their annual game.

Two of the strongest junior varsity teams developed at Cambridge and New Haven in recent years will take the field in this game. Yale has lost one game this season, to Princeton, 7-0, but since then has defeated Lafayette, 46-7, and Army, 7-0. Harvard has played tie games with Dean Academy, 0-0, and Providence College freshmen, 6-6, has defeated the Harvard freshmen, 13-6, and the Abington Old [illegible] team, 13-0.

The [illegible] work of the Harvard [illegible] team has been [illegible] this season. In scrimmage with the varsity the junior [illegible] has had unusual [illegible] and [illegible] has scored on the varsity team.

Yale's team, coached by F. W. Pond, will have Hersey and Wamerding at ends, Strauss and Stewart at tackles, Ruand and [illegible] at guards and Wilson at center.

Salem-Lynn Classical Go Heads School Grid List

Two unbeaten and untied school teams are in action tomorrow in the course of the few games listed. Chicopee goes to play unbeaten Fitchburg while Milford is at unbeaten Norwood. Neither of the perfect records appears in any danger though Norwood cannot afford to take the Milford game too lightly.

The main engagement of the day is listed at Bertram Field, Salem, where the Witches entertain Lynn Classical. This gamme looms as one of the finest of the year and with few competing attractions may draw a capacity crowd.

Everett plays host to Maynard and the home team is a heavy favorite to conquer its light foe. Chelsea goes to Peabody where the home group [illegible] a heavy choice.

Somerville rides to Newburyport for a [illegible] game. Newburyport has Reed, one of the finer passers of the season, and other good performers to make Somerville step.

Angel Guardian at Keith Academy in Lowell, St. Mary's of Waltham in an intra-city fray with St. Charles high and Quincy at Brockton are among the better games of the day.

Bayuk "Phillies"

forget two things

Forget that this cigar—at 10c—was considered the best 10c value in America.

Forget that this same cigar—now 5c—pleases the taste of more men than any other cigar on the market—irrespective of price.

Consider these facts alone. Does it please your taste? Does it give you more pleasure and satisfaction than any cigar you've ever smoked?

Other experienced smokers put Bayuk "Phillies" to this test. They compared it with cigars costing double and triple its price. The result speaks for itself. In ten months—at 5c—it has become the largest-selling and fastest-selling cigar.

Due to this rapid sale—the Bayuk "Phillies" you buy today is almost certain to be a fresh cigar. And freshness—as you know—makes a big difference in the enjoyment you get from any cigar.

Bayuk's Guarantee

In 1929—a peak sales year—the Bayuk Philadelphia Perfecto (Familiarly known as "Philadelphia Hand-made") was the largest-selling 10-cent brand in America.

Bavuk guarantees that this cigar today—at 5 cents—contains the same fine Imported Sumatra wrapper—the same fine ripe Havana and Domestic long-filler. It's the same identical cigar.

BROCKTON'S GRID RECORD IS .800 AVERAGE OVER 21 YEARS

Coach Roberts of Brockton high has been forced to keep his squad indoors because of the sloppy condition of the school field. So he takes the boys into the gym, and here he is, teaching his son Stuart how to block, with Right End Konary as the subject. Others of the first team attentively watch. Stuart Roberts has earned the quarterback job at Brockton after a fight up from the scrubs. He's only 15 and weighs just 115 pounds. The members of the varsity asked for him as pilot. And the team has found new fight and drive under his direction.

ROBERTS SETS PACE WITH GREAT TEAM

By BILL CONNELL

A rebuilt Brockton high eleven tests its new formations today as it prepares for the final fray of the season against Q[illegible] tomorrow and Waltham on Thanksgiving.

The Brockton team [illegible] turned out by Coach [illegible] Roberts. The term of office at the school is about the longest [illegible] tinuous stretch any coach has enjoyed at one school. [illegible] 21 years Roberts [illegible] more than 80 per cent of [illegible] games over the strongest [illegible] opposition. A top flight ranking.

ONE LOSS THIS YEAR

The Brockton [illegible] a notably faithful crew of fans who stick with the [illegible] its record, kept [illegible] out losing a game up to the Malden tilt.

Then Brockton was beaten for the first time in 23 games. Fitchburg since tripped Brockton but the latter came back last Saturday to defeat Manchester, N. H. Central.

Capt. Jimmy A[illegible] year and the [illegible] is one of the [illegible] Brockton surge. He [illegible] the [illegible] a standout. A[illegible] Coach Roberts [illegible] Stuart at quarterback. Stuart is only 15 years old, and weighs 115.

The coach did [illegible] the boy [illegible] competitive work until he had gained some poundage. But [illegible] the boys of the first team asked [illegible] Stuart be played in the driver's position. The other youngsters knew Stuart to be a natural pilot, smart and cool. And the way the team went with Stuart as boss proves they were correct.

BRAND NEW LINE

The line, with Astuto back, is a brand new group composed of Walter Satkus, left end; John Knight, left tackle, Harold Williamson, left guard; (had a sprained ankle; is o. k. now); Eugene Saarinen, center; Bernard Bruesseau, right guard; Henry Woronitz, 178, right tackle, Tom Konary, right end. Konary was a tackle who moved to end to replace Astuto.

Another lineman who ranks with the varsity members is Walter Chesnauskas, 180, left end or tackle. Chesnauskas, Woronitz, and Roberts are sophomores, so next two years' prospects are bright.

The squad numbered more than 150 at first call. There are a few over 90 left now, all equipped. Coach Roberts and his assistant, Charley Holden, ex-Brown ace, handle the varsity group of 33. About 30 are included on Team C which has Herb Semino, ex-B. U., and Albert Trosky, ex-Villanova, as mentors. The frosh squad is directed by Lincoln MacPherson. Richard Annahian from last year's eleven is his aide.

Some of the subs who have been useful this fall include Enus Christiani, (an ace carrier next fall), Charley Paraskie, Jim MacQuinn, and Bob Deighton, backs; Walter Leach, and W[illegible], ends; Adam S[illegible], tackle; Charley W[illegible]; Fred Coots, center.

Because of the unseasoned material Coach Roberts has been juggling the players [illegible] campaign, so only a limited number of subs have seen much action. Yet many of the boys are back next fall so 1934 should see a bigger and better Shoe City eleven, to match the first rank teams of the past.

Harvard Team Confident as Yale Squad Arrives

who has shot into the forefront during the past three weeks is a Winthrop and Worcester Academy athlete, while Litman came direct to Cambridge from Brookline. Dean is from Exeter Academy and Cohasset.

Warren Casey at center and Dave Kopans at right tackle are both products of Charlie Fitzgerald at Boston Latin, with homes in Dorchester.

Record for record, man for man passing, kicking and ball carrying ability matched team for team, there is little choice between the two elevens on paper.

Perhaps Harvard has a slight edge in passing. Yale returns the compliment with a running game which has gained a little more ground against just as stiff competition.

WATCH LASSITER

The two most feared ball carriers in the Stadium tomorrow will be Litman of Harvard and Capt. Bob Lassiter of Yale. The latter has a decided edge in experience.

The Brookline junior, however, showed that he reached his stride when he scored both touchdowns against the Bruins last Saturday.

This pair possesses many of the same characteristics. They are hard runners with a high knee action and a real drive which makes them treacherous to tackle and dif[illegible]

Of the squad of 40 players who landed at Back Bay Station today and work out at the Stadium this afternoon, only three regulars remain of the team which lined up against the Crimson at the Bowl last November.

O'Connell, Wilbur, Betner, Converse, Parker, Sullivan, Crowley and Levering departed along the graduation trail. Last November Yale had a smart, experienced team which played its best football against Princeton and Harvard.

FEW ELI SUBS

It was a case of building from the ground up. Root had a few good substitutes in Overall and Kimball, ends; Kilcullen, a tackle; DeAngelis, an undersized guard; Johnson and Malin, giant centers and Callan and Nikkel, backs.

Tomorrow's Yale team will be young. Naturally, it has pointed towards Harvard, and it hopes to click at its best tomorrow. It has the advantage of a lay-off last Saturday while Harvard was facing a stiff test in Brown.

But, on the other hand, Yale is forced to figure on the Princeton game, next Saturday, a game only second in importance to the Harvard affair.

The Harvards have nothing more at stake and can toss the works without fear of ruining their future chances.

At the wings, Harvard looks to be the better. Shaun Kelly and Art Choate have given excellent accounts of themselves recently. They show to far better advantage than the comparatively inexperienced Bernie Rankin of Hyde Park, a sophomore, and Combs, a newcomer, who has only recently been moved up to the Yale varsity from junior varsity ranks.

KOPANS BEST TACKLE

Dave Kopans should be the outstanding tackle on the field. Two years ago he was a starter against Yale but was ineligible last year. With Leon Francisco at the other tackle, they should pair well against the combined efforts of the 230-pound Clare Curtin and Jack Kilcullen, steady but not sensational Yale performers.

Curtin it was who was largely responsible for Yale's victory over Dartmouth. He place-kicked both points after touchdown as Yale won 14-13. In fact the Abington tackle has yet to fail in a placement attempt this year, eight of them dangling from his belt.

In the center of the line there is little discrepancy. Schumann, Casey and Gundlach for Harvard and DeAngelis, Malin and Nichols for Yale are rated about even.

MALIN AT CENTER

Vic Malin has finally won back his position at center, taken away from him early in the season when the coaches demoted him for being overweight. He tips the scales at 230 pounds.

Joe Johnson was scheduled to start at center when Lonny Goodyear broke his arm in scrimmage last week but Malin lost some of his poundage and showed such improvement in the past two weeks that Coach Root shifted in his favor.

Yale has a pair of quarterbacks who may alternate. Tommy Curtin of Pittsfield is being given the preference over Jerry Roscoe.

Saturday's Grid Children

Harvard, Yale Come to Grips and Nary a Hero in Sight

Yesterday's Heroes Now Cool Their Heels in Stadium's Draft

By DAVID F. EGAN

"Oh," said Mr. David Quirk as a sneer curled his black-bearded upper lip. "They will be just two teams trying to out-dumb each other," which is the harshest criticism of a Harvard-Yale football game your commissioner has heard in many years.

It is quite true, though, that the Harvards and the Yales will enter the comical classic with mediocre teams and without a solitary star of all-America or almost all-America ranking.

Take a walk back through the dusty corridors of time. Last year, it was Jack Crickard of Harvard and Joe Crowley of Yale. The year before it was a personal duel between Albie Booth of Yale and Barry Wood of Harvard.

Harvard has always had a Ben Ticknor or an Brad Hardy; a George Owen or a Charlie Buell; an Eddie Casey, Babe Felton, Billy Murray, Eddie Mahan, Tack Hardwick or Charley Brickley.

Yale has had its full quota of Mallorys, Ponds, Kempions, Coys, Hinkeys and Shevlins. The teams of both institutions in recent years have slumped below the form of the burlier and stouter institutions in the Middle and Far West, but even so, they have always managed to boast an outstanding star.

Their failure this season to reach into the hat and produce such a star is a grevious one, and a direct affront to the newspaper profession. In the years that have skipped by with alarming speed, a young man could squat himself down behind his typewriter, glare at the keys once or twice, and then run the length of the field—I mean the column—without scratching his head more than once or twice.

The Wood-Booth engagement provided a lush, fertile field any day that news was scarce. Now news the week before a Harvard-Yale game is always as scarce as sheer silk stockings or white flannel trousers in an Alaskan igloo. That means, to us of the newspaper profession, that we must exercise our ingenuity and double-trot our wits during that blank period.

The following stories are always in order, and this should be of great service to those who are goofy enough to want to be sports writers.

(1) On the Monday following the final tune-up game, it is always good policy to review the game of the previous Saturday; pick out the flaws which you were lucky enough to observe; and mention the halt, lame and maimed who will probably be unable to appear in the classic.

(2) The Chewsday yarn should be a hallelujah, stating that the maimed and injured are progressing nicely and will probably be able to play, providing that the doctor see fits and if the coach needs them. The generous use of the words "providing" and "if" constitute one an expert.

(3) Once established as an expert by such a genial concoction of "providing" and "if" words, it is then easy for the expert, on Wednesday, to go into a long and involved history of the great classic, which nobody with the least particle of brain matter ever reads.

(4) Thursday is the difficult day. It may be a highly technical and greatly involved description of the different offenses, with great screaming about the difference between the Notre Dame offense of Yale and the single wing-back from a semi-kick formation of Harvard. There must be great gabbling about balanced and unbalanced lines; plays off the weak side; guards who are pulled out of the line; forward passes that develop from a lateral; and all the complicated, confusing terms which you and your bosom friends know.

(5) Friday, in the past, has always been the easiest day of the week. The following lead was always good: "Two of the greatest stars in the long and honored history of the Harvard-Yale football series will meet tomorrow at the Harvard Stadium (or the mammoth Yale Bowl) when the great Barry Wood of Harvard and the equally great Albie Booth of Yale meet for the last time in their undergraduate careers."

Then would come a long and explosive blast of adjectives and adverbs and fiery verbs, giving the personal history of the respective glittering and glamorous stars, and laying great stress on their athletic rivalry, which usually dated back to prep school days.

Saturday's story is plain, unvarnished hokum, a lot of words messed up together into vague sentences by a writer who wishes to hell that Harvard and Yale had never been invented; hopes that they all kill each other out there on the sacred sod; and says no, that there aren't any loose tickets around.

If you are fair-minded, you can see that a Friday story is really drudgery, and almost manual labor, if you haven't any stars to glorify. And that, my friends, is why I wrote this story for Friday, and exposed the black art of us writing fellers.

TRAFFIC RULES FOR GAME

The traffic regulations enforced by Boston and Cambridge police in the vicinity of the Harvard Stadium tomorrow are as follows:

DAILY ROUNDUP

Now we'll see if Jesse Harper can take it as well as "Hunk" Anderson. In order to insure a capacity crowd on Saturday for the Notre Dame-Southern California classic, Graduate Manager Harper has refused to allow the game to be broadcast.

From all sections of the country protests against Harper's decision have reached South Bend as hundreds of thousands of radio fans had planned to listen in on one of the networks.

Manager Jack Adams of Detroit has his Red Wings in on the carpet today as a result of that terrible shellacking they received from the Bruins. The Detroit-Bruin rivalry, for obvious reasons, is more sincerely bitter than any in the league, especially as far as the Red Wings are concerned. The Adams crew would rather beat the Rossmen than any other outfit and it is adding insult to injury for them to be beaten by Boston on their home ice, not to mention the size of the score.

Maxie Rosenbloom, world's light heavyweight champion, is also chasing the elusive dollar through the Southwest. He clashes with Clyde Christine at Houston, Tex., on November 28.

Gen. John Phelan is entitled to a hand for refusing to allow the referee to stop the Loughran-Impelletiere bout when the former started to bleed from a wound on the side of his mouth. The Red Sox reserve list includes only 31 players, giving Eddie Collins the opportunity to pick up nine more before spring training starts. Catcher Eddie Connolly and Urban Pickering, veteran infielder, are still Fenway property, in case you have forgotten. TROJANS LAND IN CHICAGO

Chicago, Nov. 24 (INS)—The Trojans of Southern California arrived here today on their journey to South Bend, Ind., to meet the Notre Dame football team in their annual intersectional battle.

Coach Howard Jones was to direct his sun-tanned players today in their third workout since leaving Los Angeles. The squad was to drill at Stagg Field, University of Chicago.

Victory tomorrow over the Notre Dame eleven would make it three in a row for the husky Southern Californians.

Notre Dame's hopes of scoring their third victory of the season against the Pacific Coast foes received a setback when Tom Gorman, center, and Tom Roach, right tackle, went to the hospital with bad colds.

Heartly Anderson, Irish coach, said the two regulars would likely see action but he gloomily admitted that they would not be in top form.

Canzoneri 7 to 5 Choice Over 'Keed'

New York, Nov. 24 (AP)—Tony Canzoneri and Kid Chocolate, who once fought before a $30,000 house, will renew their feud in Madison Square Garden tonight, with prospects of receipts barely touching $20,000.

Chocolate still is world's featherweight champion in the eyes of the New York State Athletic Commission, but the dusky Cuban's stock has taken a precipitate drop in the last year. Canzoneri rates a 7 to 5 favorite for their ten-round non-title duel tonight.

Coach Lew Manly led his entire Tufts football squad of 38 players, four assistant coaches and three trainers to Amherst today for the Jumbos' final and objective game with the Massachusetts State tomorrow afternoon.

The trek was made by bus and started immediately after lunch. The party was due at the Lord Jeff Inn in time for dinner.

A short signal drill and blackboard talk completed Tufts' practice for this 31st contest, in a rivalry that began away back in 1886. Every player reported in excellent physical condition, except Capt. John McGonagle, who will be given the honor of starting at his tackle post, but will be relieved after a few plays because of a shoulder injury.

EVEN MONEY BET

Betting on the game is at even money. It's the first time this season that the Medford eleven hasn't been a heavy favorite over the opposition, and Coach Manly, for one, is delighted.

"We were favorites over Williams and we were beaten. The same thing happened in our game with Bowdoin. I don't say we would have escaped these only black marks on our season's record if we had entered the tilts as the underdogs, but I'm convinced it never helps a team to be picked to win easily," said the mentor as he rushed about making everything ready for today's journey.

"I look for a close, hard-fought game at Amherst," he continued. "I'm not predicting victory, but with all my regulars except Capt. McGonagle in good shape and Raymie MacLean back in the backfield, I feel we have an even chance to win."

Both Tufts and Mass. State have five victories in seven starts to their credit. Tomorrow's winner will be generally recognized as the New England small college champion.

Comparative scores give Mass. State a slight edge. The Amherst eleven opened its season with a 14 to 0 victory over Bowdoin, which beat Tufts last week, 26 to 12. Conn. State, the only other team both have faced, was beaten by Mass. State 40 to 7 and by Tufts 42 to 0.

MacLEAN TO START

Raymie McLean had to miss last week's game because of the death of his father and the Jumbos' attack without this flashy halfback is greatly weakened.

Capt. Louis Bush of Mass. State, the country's leading scorer last season, is not listed to start against Tufts, but the 148-pound backfield ace is expected to make his appearance very early in the battle.

Tufts will outweigh State by a wide margin in both the line and backfield. Two of the Jumbo forwards tip the beam at 200 and the lightweights weigh 168. State's heaviest linemen weigh only 185. Three of the Medford backs weigh 180 or more, while the heaviest State ball carrier is listed at only 160.

Tufts has a slight edge in the series with 15 victories against ten for Mass. State and five ties. Last season the Jumbos won 6 to 2.

"Gunner" Hudson, N. Y. Writer, Dead

New York, Nov. 23 (INS)—The New York sport world today mourned the loss of Walter "Gunner" Hudson, sports writer for the New York Mirror, who died in Neurological Institute last night.

"Gunner" one of the most popular sports writers in the country, underwent a brain operation three weeks ago. He is survived by his wife and two children.

In Farewell Game -:- For Tufts Eleven

Roy Woodworth has been a standby at Tufts for the past three seasons. Regular tackle and a corker. Leaves with Tufts team this afternoon for Amherst where team will wind up its season tomorrow. Roy was injured in the Bowdoin game last week. But he's a hardy hombre and is back on the firing line again as good as ever. Six footer and weighs 200 pounds. Tufts has had great success against State since Manly took the helm. Close game forecast tomorrow but Tufts should win.

SONNY SIGNS TO MEET SAVOLDI

Gus Sonnenberg, former world's heavyweight wrestling champion, has signed to meet "Jumping Joe" Savoldi, former Notre Dame football star and conqueror of Jim Londos, in the semi-final bout to the championship match between Ed Don George and Ike Numa at the Boston Garden on Thanksgiving Day.

Sonnenberg [illegible] has hopes of regaining his [illegible] and figured that if he could knock off Savoldi that he would be on his way to the championship once more.

Last week at the Garden the old Dynamiter won from Casey Kazanjian only to lose to Jim Browning in New York last Monday night. Browning and [illegible] which [illegible] New York.

Numa has opened a [illegible] in Boston and is confident he will beat George. It will be [illegible] attempt to lift the [illegible] famous toe hold from [illegible].

Pre-Game Probe Points to Grid Upsets Ahead

New York, Nov. 24 (AP)—Still a bit shell-shocked after last week's dazzling array of upsets, football followers, seeking for winners, discover another set of traditional battles lining up to confront them tomorrow.

In most instances there is little to choose between the big game rivals, but on the basis of results [illegible] the prospects [illegible] some [illegible].

ARMY-NAVY—This [illegible] [illegible] between the service [illegible] since 1927 [illegible] the Army favored. The Tars are much stronger than a year ago but the [illegible] in general, has the advantages of manpower [illegible] with the Cadets. With Fuzz Buckler, Red Blumberger and [illegible] Navy has plenty of backfield strength to match Army. Jack Buckler [illegible] and Joe Stancook, but the West Pointers appear stronger.

YALE-HARVARD—Seldom [illegible] come [illegible] more [illegible] matched on paper [illegible]. For here again there is a [illegible] leaning toward Yale, [illegible] largely because of the [illegible] showing against Georgia and the fact that the Blue had [illegible] the benefit of two weeks of [illegible]. Harvard won its first major [illegible] last week [illegible] [illegible] Brown and Dartmouth [illegible] Army and Georgia. Harvard has been beaten by [illegible] and [illegible].

NOTRE DAME-SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA—The [illegible] finds both teams already beaten and the edge in Southern California's favor. Tied by Oregon State and beaten by Stanford the Trojans came back with a bang last week to win over Oregon 26-0. Notre Dame's first touchdown in five games beat Northwestern last week but the Ramblers still are doing most of their ground gaining between the 20-yard lines.

MICHIGAN-NORTHWESTERN—Michigan, the choice to hurdle the last obstacle in the Wolverines' path to the Big Ten title.

PRINCETON-RUTGERS—Rutgers has a fast, clever team but the scarlet appears in for a beating from the unbeaten, untied and unscored upon Tigers.

MINNESOTA-WISCONSIN—The Badgers will fight hard but Minnesota should win handily.

STANFORD-CALIFORNIA—The far west's natural of the day with Stanford a slight favorite to win. If Oregon for the coast conference title and perhaps receive the Rose Bowl assignment.

WASHINGTON STATE-WASHINGTON—Another toss-up [illegible] apparently as good a guess as any.

LEHIGH-LAFAYETTE—[illegible] renewal of one of the [illegible] football rivalries with [illegible] favored.

BONE CRUSHERS PLAY SUNDAY

Charlie Strack's Bone Crushers eleven will meet the Medford A. A. team Sunday [illegible] Medford High [illegible] at [illegible]. Strack is confident [illegible] which has been [illegible] [illegible] of the Medford [illegible].

[illegible] for the [illegible] known [illegible] Saxo, Fordham, Boston, M[illegible], Holy Cross, Hank Barrett, Dartmouth, Kewpie Keenan, [illegible] [illegible] and John Spellman of B[illegible].

BEAVER SEXTET READY FOR B. U.

With the opening game with B. U. less than two weeks away, [illegible] has his hockey [illegible] for the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] about the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] with a year of [illegible] for the opening [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] who was [illegible] of the [illegible] with [illegible] will be on hand and [illegible] for the [illegible] [illegible] has returned [illegible] [illegible] there will [illegible] at [illegible] [illegible].

B. C. Makes Three Changes in Lineup for Purple Tilt

This trio has been [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Coach McKenney [illegible] get their [illegible] [illegible] if their [illegible] [illegible] for the [illegible] of the practice sessions.

All three were impressive against Western Mass. and Driscoll [illegible] best the hardest of the Eagle ball carriers.

While Freitas will start at quarter, McKenney plans to shift him during the game to a halfback berth, where his running can be [illegible].

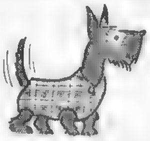
IMPORTED SCOTCH GRAIN

Winter Weights for Wear and Warmth



For the last ten years we have made more fine shoes of Genuine Imported Scotch Grains than any Shoe Manufacturer in America. This year we have built-in more Value and introduced more new Comfort Features in these Stout, Stylish Winter Oxfords than ever before in the history of this Company.

For instance, when a man takes off a light Kidskin or Calfskin, with a sole that's worn thin, and slips his foot into a new Winter-weight Oxford, the Heavy Upper and Heavy Bottom is apt to feel as stiff as a board.

But we have made a SCOTCH GRAIN SHOE THAT'S FLEXIBLE. We have put in a Flexible Inner-sole and put on a Flexible Outer-sole. You can still enjoy all the Weight, Warmth and Wear, and when you step out in our new Scotch Grains you'll get a new sensation, because this Heavy Sole will bend and flex with every step.

All Styles and Shapes for Street and Stadium—Wingtip Brogues and Semi-Brogues—Straight Tips, Stitched Tips and Plain Toes with Saddle Strap—Full Leather Linings—Solid Leather Heels and Rubber Heels—Heavy Single Soles and Full Double Soles to Shank. CONWAY PICKS TONY TO WHIP FAVORITE

Coin Picks Tony to Beat Lou

Jack Conway's Magic Coin today picked Tony Shucco, on the short end of 2 to 1 betting, to win from Lou Brouillard at the Boston Garden tonight. The Coin's 1933 record.

Tony [illegible] North End [illegible] weight [illegible] the [illegible] up with Lou Brouillard of Worcester in a 10-round [illegible] the Boston Garden tonight.

It will be Shucco's major ring effort, and he says he will go crashing through to victory.

Tony's Almer Mater was the "College of Hard Knocks." He has been obliged to fight for everything he has got in this world. He took up boxing because it furnished an outlet to his athletic ability, and offered him the opportunity to gain fame and riches.

HARD WORKER

Shucco hasn't shirked as he has [illegible] got [illegible] first [illegible] Schaaf [illegible] bouts [illegible] up for [illegible] of [illegible] provide [illegible] of life.

DEFEATED ROSENBLOOM

Raimault decided to feature Winston and Schaaf as a part of a double windup so as to eliminate some of the opposition to his proposed show. He matched Maxie Rosenbloom [illegible] heavyweight champion, with Tony Shucco in a second 10-round bout. He informed the boxing commission he was offering the Winston-Schaaf go as an extra attraction. The show was then approved.

Shucco furnished a startling upset when he defeated Rosenbloom. The fact it was an overweight bout was the only thing that saved Rosenbloom's title.

Later Shucco knocked out Tuffy Griffiths, and rode high and fancy in several New York bouts.

Now Tony is back in the home town trying to go places. He will [illegible] tonight with the former world's welterweight and middleweight king. Brouillard packs on weight faster than any boxer in the world, and steps from one class into the next.

LOU CARRIES TONNAGE

Lou says low weight deprived him of his strength and punch in his recent go with Vince Dundee. [illegible] into the ring tonight. He will be able to get all of his power behind his socks.

Tony's Right for Lou Fight

Critics say Tony Shucco will be licked by Lou Brouillard at the Garden tonight. But critics are not always right. Betting has been 10 to 6 in favor of Brouillard. Unless odds drop sharply before nightfall Shucco money will fill the Garden. Shucco has licked Maxie Rosenbloom, light heavyweight champion. Also stopped Tuffy Griffiths at Mechanics Building not long ago. Has been fighting like a champion during the past year. Tony has height and reach on Lou.

U.S.G.A. ADOPTS CHANGES IN GOLF RULES

New York, Nov. 24 (INS)—The U. S. Golf Association today announced the adoption of changes effective as of Jan. 1, 1934, in the rules of golf approved by the Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews, Scotland.

The changes have been the subject of consideration by the two associations for more than a year and it is believed they will clarify certain rules which have caused trouble in the past.

More than 20 definitions, a dozen stroke rules, about three dozen general rules and ten points on the etiquette of the game have either been changed or clarified.

Among the interesting changes under the heading of etiquette are these: No one must stand behind the hole when a player is making a stroke. A player must immediately leave the putting green when the result of a hole has been determined. This provision bars practice putts, delaying following players.

All holes made in a bunker must now be filled whereas formerly a player was required to fill only holes made by himself. And players must at all times play without undue delay.

CAN CHANGE POOR BALL

Under stroke rules more than two competitors may now be sent out at a time. If a player plays one or more strokes with a wrong ball he incurs a penalty of two strokes instead of disqualification. A player now has the right to change a ball which has become unfit for play. The penalty is increased from one to two strokes where a competitor on the putting green strikes his opponent's ball.

Under general rules changes a player is now permitted to take his stance outside the limits of the teeing ground, and a player may retee a ball accidentally knocked off in addressing it on the teeing ground.

When a ball is dropped it must come to rest not nearer the hole. New obstructions now recognized are "bridge, bridge planking, seat, hut and shelter." Unless the ball lies in or touches a hazard, the removal of loose impediments is now permitted even though they are more than a club's length from the ball and even if the loose impediment lies in a hazard.

STROKE RECALLED

If a player on the putting green plays when his opponent should have played, the new rule makes it mandatory instead of optional that the stroke shall be at once recalled.

If a player after holing out and leaving his opponent with a stroke for a half incur any penalty he shall concede the half.

Under definitions, a path [illegible] which are no longer hazards [illegible] scrapes and casual water [illegible] tracks are excluded as hazards.

Casual water is now any temporary accumulation of water [illegible] a bunker is now defined as a depression where soil is exposed and sometimes covered with sand.

The definition of a stroke is now limited to the forward movement of the club made with the intention of striking the ball and excludes "any contact between the head of the club and the ball resulting in a movement of the ball."

And the definition of a lost ball now provides that the five-minute search period does not begin until the player or his caddy has begun a search, and there is also included the express provision that if the ball be subsequently found it may not be played.

'PRIZE FIGHTER AND THE LADY' ON SCREEN

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

"Prelims" are on . . . Leo the Lion has roared, announcing the fistic battle of the cinema's century . . . introduction is by way of being figurative bouts to bring out the heart interest, kisses, clinches . . . Myrna Loy in Cupid's ring, first as the sweetheart of Otto Kruger, racketeer . . . slangdom has a harsher word for the kind of girl she is . . . an auto crash, all very convenient for the purpose, brings her face to face with Max Baer . . . it must be love, folks . . . kayo for Otto, wedding bells for Max . . . until the day he is discovered to be a "two timer" . . . soon the big battle . . . at last . . .

Max Baer

Round by Round Story

ROUND 2—Up and at 'em again . . . wish Jack Conway were here to do the trick scientifically . . . "Mr. Boston" would be aces . . . this isn't cinema . . . this is prize fighting . . . and how! . . . gong . . . gong . . . so on, through the tenth . . . Maxie is down and up, up and down . . . so often you lose count . . . groggy that boy . . . looks like a goner . . .

But, ah, no! There's the bride who kayoed his heart, smiling encouragement; no longer is she miffed. Kruger by her side, hoping it's Carnera, and registering anxiety . . . jealousy . . .

ROUND 11—Maxie is coming back . . . hooray! . . . this is a new day, folks, and the beginning of a new epoch . . . our hero is slamming the Mountain's sides, and yeah, even his peak! . . . Unbelievable but true . . . down falls the mammoth one . . . again . . . again . . .

ROUNDS 12—15—All Maxie's way . . . he is fighting for his lost Lenore . . . and, by heck, he'll win her . . . On, Salvator, on! . . . final gong.

They Call the Turns

"By decision of the judg-ges," rings the stentorian voice of Mr. Tobey, "the fight is a draw!"

Pandemonium then, and the happy finish is near . . . epilogue has Miss Loy and Baer in one last, long clinch . . . curtain . . .

That about sums up the story (what there is of plot) and the spirit of the vastly exciting ring battle between Carnera and Baer (here's hoping we all may see the real thing between these two, some fine day!) that climaxes "The Prize Fighter and the Lady." But this department's sketchy treatment hasn't brought out the wondrous accompaniment of tremendous noises from the myriad fans at this mimic fisticuffs. Nor the amazing witchery of motion and emotion in Walter Huston's mobile face as he watches . . . nor the equally potent looks from Otto Kruger . . . nor even the many little battles, of comic import, among the spectators.

Huston Real Star

Huston is the best actor here, playing the fight manager to the life. Kruger peps the fictional romance by a flawless characterization. Miss Loy is not only more attractive than ever, but shapes up better as actress. And as for young Baer, he is surprisingly at ease, no great shakes of a player, but handling his lines smoothly, pleasing voice, and apparently to the movie manner born. They speak of him as likely to be another Clark Gable, but we're putting salt on that sparrow's tail.

But his first effort in the cinema is distinctly a triumph for him.

Chardon Four in Works of Beethoven

By MOSES SMITH

The Chardon String Quartet playing at Brattle Hall, Cambridge, gave their second concert of the season, in the course of which they will have played all of the Beethoven works in this field—one of music's greatest possessions.

The present program included the last three quartets of the early Beethoven of opus 18. It is a mistake to assume that these quartets are merely in the image of Beethoven's precursors, Mozart and Haydn. New Policy at the Park Tonight

LATEST IN FASHION WORLD

First of Minsky Shows Entitled 'Wanda Rover From the Back Bay'; Censor Seekers

By GEORGE HOLLAND

That little censorial flurry at City Hall seeming to have subsided, those intrepid purveyors of modern burlesque, the Minsky Freres of New York, will blithely introduce tonight a new burlesque policy on the broad-minded stage of the Park Theater, with Gypsy Rose Lee.

This old-line Washington st. stage has had a welcoming beacon as its pilot light for many years. It shows green, meaning go ahead, to any sort of policy that comes along.

Gypsy Rose Lee

Devoted at first to the legitimate, and then to the movies, it went legitimate again about nine years ago when, because of highly attractive terms the producer of "Rain" decided that Jeanne Eagles would play her Boston engagement there.

The old maxim that "they'll go any place if they wish to see the show," was partly responsible. But the owners of "Rain" failed to count on the mercurial Miss Eagels. Jeanne was frankly affronted at playing "Sadie Thompson" in a theater which but lately had centered to 35-cent spenders, while the traditions of the theater were represented by other theaters, several of which were available.

Thus many Bostonians missed seeing Jeanne Engels in her greatest role. Jeanne became so unhappy about it all that she found it less irking to be very ill in her hotel. Of late, the Park has failed on idle days.

Theatre Remodeled

Now the popular [illegible] theater has been remodeled and dressed up. It will be a mid-town Temple of Burlesque and is not expected to wean away much of the standby trade of the Old Howard. Perhaps it will not. Two burlesque houses may create greater interest in this type of amusement and burlesque followers may attend both shows.

The Park's burlesque is called "Burlesque Moderne," meaning "Burlesque Minsky," although of higher degree than the New York standard. I think the Minky boys are altogether too reticent about letting the world, as well as the insiders and the censors, know about their connections.

"Minsky" has became an exciting trade-name. Fannie Brice advertised it in a song that all Boston, judging from the difficulty one experienced in getting seats, heard at the Shubert.

Be that as it may, tonight's premiere will be graced by civic and society leaders, the male portion wearing "tails," and the female—furs. That's classing it up, but I hope it doesn't go too far, for it's a pleasure to see capacity houses and the poor shy burlesque adepts shouldn't be the objects of stares through lorgnettes, and affrighted.

The First Bill

The title of the first show is strictly a la Minsky. It is "Wanda Rover From the Back Bay." This is a sublimated variation of the Minsky titles that had Broadway agasp, and can be traced, I think, to the Mae West invitation: "Come up and see me sometime!" Wander Over! Get it? I recall that Brennan and Savoy popularized twelve years ago a smirking cry: "You must come over, Margie." There's nothing much new.

Except! In Boston licensing of the past, there has always been a nice accord in matters of public morality protection between the Mayor's office and its sub-offices. I don't understand all this fuss at all, unless it makes for a warning to the succeeding city censor under Mayor Mansfield that the job isn't just a romp through the pay-days.

That brings to mind the fact that prospective censors "under Mansfield" are popping up all over town. If one more—just one—proceeds to "let me in," I shall be tempted to seek out some one close to the mayor-elect and suggest that any candidate who expresses a wish for the job in order that he, or she, may attend the first-nights, be barred as incompetent.

Censor Candidate

In New York yesterday, where the columnists are having fun with the Minsky invasion of Bawston and this censoring business again, I was tipped to a new "sure bet" for the job. This candidate would have to spend most of his wages in hiring an interpreter to communicate his messages to the mayor.

The old town has been kidded long enough about its censoring, due mostly to the thoroughly-honest but slightly Victorian code of the able and poular Stanton White's famous predecessor, John Casey. The job requires intelligence, some suavity, a good deal of common sense, an eye to the city's relationship to other and more allegedly liberal centers of the country, and a modicum of literacy. Unfortunately there's not enough money in it for the candidate who I am told has the refusal of the job—if he permits it to get that far.

Bancroft Now Is on Again

"Blood Money" reveals the inside of the bail bond racket. In addition to Bancroft, the cast features Frances Dee, Judith Anderson, Chick Chandler and Blossom Seeley.

Headlining the stage show will be Marie Cambarelli, assisted by Bert Prival, "Dancer Eccentrique," with Al Evans at the piano. Others on the same program include Leavitt & Lockwood and "Their Merry Makers" in "Satires of 1934," Vic and Laurie in "Just a Gigolo," and Tom, Dick and Harry in "Always Belittlin."

Stage Feature

George Hinkel

Originally from the coal mines of Pennsylvania, Hinkel first started to sing in a church choir at Mount Carmel, Penn. Since then he has appeared in movie theaters in conjunction with organ slides, in vaudeville and later in minstrel shows.

Stage Revue at Two Theaters Tonight

Once again a Lou Walters' revue will make a stage appearance at two suburban theaters. The Everglade's Floor Show, with girls and specialty acts goes to the Egyptian Theater in Brighton, where they will appear at 8.15 tonight and then, later on in the evening at the Central Square Theater in Cambridge.

Miss Beautiful of Yore

Joan Crawford Will Be Starred in "The Latest From Paris," Wanger to Produce Film

Los Angeles, Nov. 24—Here's something that is new in Hollywood. Adrian, fashion exponent and gentleman who starts the styles by his unique fashion creations for Joan Crawford, Marion Davies, Norma Shearer, Greta Garbo, and all the rest of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer favorites, is trying to find a way to patent his screen styles. Certain manufacturers take a look at the movies and get busy copying Adrian's styles.

Joan Blondell can let her hair go back to its natural color and she can add Barnes to her name, but she cannot hope to get away from James Cagney's pictures. Exhibitors from the Atlantic to the Pacific have DEMANDED that Warner Brothers reunite Joan and Jimmie in a screen romance. Jack Warner and Hal Wallis, head man at Warners, therefore called all bets off on "The Hair Chaser" until Joan was put into the feminine lead opposite Cagney, with Michael Curtiz directing.

A Love Quarrel

There are those who say Mary Brian called a halt on her romance with Don [illegible] the night of his house warming. Mary walked out of the party and those who saw her sudden departure say she didn't look what one might call happy. At any rate, Mary is as cold to Don as yesterday morning's fried egg. If half the adventures Capt. Achmed Abdullah had when he was stationed in Africa as a captain in the British Army are true, Hollywood must seem mighty dull to him. This is a bad time for Jean Harlow to be holding out for more money. She didn't click with "Bombshell" when the public thought it was a war picture. It was something of a shock to MGM to know that their platinum blonde was not sufficiently popular herself to draw a crowd into the theaters. Right on top of the report that "Bombshell" was not doing the big business that everyone expected, Miss Harlow asked for more money. Unofficially, it is reported that she will go to Europe unless MGM comes through with a new contract and a bigger salary. Wonder who is advising her?

SPECTATOR'S COMMENT

EXPANSION IS PLANNED FOR COMING YEAR

Discreet Policy in Trading Favored by Leaders

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor, Boston American

Numerous American corporations are planning for expansion in the coming year. To the list of such companies recently published here can now be ad[illegible] E[illegible]on Corp., which will make a $2,000,000 [illegible] plant, which may add as many as a thousand workers to the Industrial Rayon staff.

Numerous leading State St. investment bankers and ad[illegible] suggest a discreet trading policy over the next few days. This is partly because pivotal shares have shown themselves unable to press through the tops set the first of the current week.

Following the speculative reaction in silver S. E. Berg, long [illegible] leaders in the New England woolen trade, who has made exhaustive studies of silver, tells us he believes the restoration of p[illegible] the white metal advanced to 60 cents an ounce. Mr. Berg's statistics show [illegible] United S[illegible] silver price in the United States was higher than that in the London market, and does not think th[illegible] Berg is one of those who believe that the middleman or jobber is the fellow who will get things going toward the stratosphere again as soon as this class of citizen is able again to raise the needed funds. He urges the placing of more silver currency in circulation according to a carefully worked out plan.

Although Acting Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau denies he is drafting a plan for U. S. Government purchase of silver, this is not to be interpreted as meaning no plans are underway to change the complexion of the silver situation.

In the chemical industry an interesting price situation is developing. Ameri[illegible] offered in Boston this week allow price [illegible] the seller within 10 days. Other contracts allow revision of prices in [illegible] and still another concern puts a clause in its current contracts allowing price revisions in both [illegible] September of 1934.

Recently chemical prices were advanced, and the latest mark-up is that of Devoe & Raynolds, who raised paint prices about 5 per cent in June. Next month, they inform customers, they make further advances, averaging around 7½ per cent. Du Pont, Glidden and others today followed Devoe's lead.

State St. Circles Feel Recent Dips Spoil Bull Plans

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

State St. trading circles are of [illegible] so far this week may be considered a reliable guide. The barometer figures [illegible] on the downside. At the same time [illegible] the industrial index fell [illegible] the rails once more refuse to follow their lead and it remains to be seen how soon the list will straighten out.

The last line of defense for the rails is 38 on the rail composition. Once this is broken it will be necessary for the constructive forces to begin their preparations for a rise all over again. However [illegible] follow a bull lead does not augur [illegible] sizable lines of stock. We prefer to travel light and step out fast if the 38 mark fails to hold.

RAIL ACTION IMPORTANT

In the light of recent events it is hard to argue that the rails are not the key group. It is so apparent that one might almost say, that as the rails go so does the list. Four times since July, including the top, [illegible] assault on higher levels, after the industrials made a start. This keeps many would-be bulls on the sidelines.

Notes: All the above is one reason we can not understand [illegible] operator . . . He is reported to be [illegible] . . . Nothing other than the expectation of wild inflation seen [illegible] warrant such an attitude [illegible]

Now if a few personal ideas are not out of order, we want to set out a theory of probable market action. The industrials are entitled [illegible]. They have had a good rise and are ahead of the rails. Assuming this [illegible] settle all questions as to the type of the next rise.

We think it will be a major affair. With the July highs being surpassed by the two principal groups. The reason is that our wanderings in the last few days have brought news of first water investment buying. It is in good [illegible] find it fairly well completed. Then [illegible] a scarce equity supply.

The murk and gloom surrounding present monetary policies seems to be lifting, insofar as the share markets are concerned. Big operators see it as advantageous to own equities if inflation is coming. And they are just as sure a declaration of early stabilization will react favorably. This explains the buying we reported above.

Here and There: We hear utility property valuations must be brought down before much financing may be done . . . U. S. Steel has had a normal recovery of 50 per cent from its most recent low . . . As have a number of other leaders . . . Some very good scale down buying is looked for in Celanese and Beth Steel . . . Profits are said to be taken in du Pont.

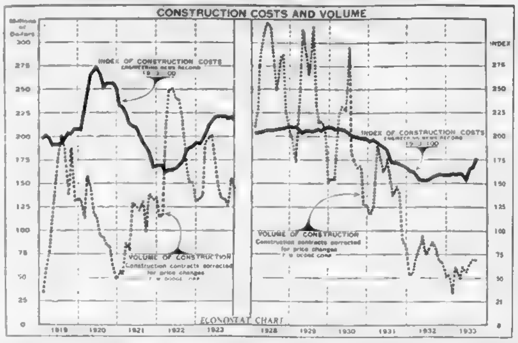
Construction Costs Studied



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE
Editor, The Econostat

This chart is one of a series making a comparison between the period 1919-1923 and the period 1928-1933. It covers the volume of construction based upon construction contracts reported by F. W. Dodge Corporation and corrected for price changes by The Econostat. The index of construction costs is compiled by the Engineering News-Record, with average costs in 1913 equal to 100.

It may be said that in general, construction as a barometer of business has been seriously neglected by statisticians. They have placed excessive emphasis upon orthodox weather vanes such as bookings of the U. S. Steel Corporation, freight carloadings, pig iron production and the like. Little effort has been made to analyze the importance of these various indices and treat them accordingly.

Construction directly and its related industries is by all odds the most important single field of American enterprise. In a normal year it accounts for a volume of [illegible]ven to eight billion dollars with ramifications that would add several billion dollars more. Construction contracts are the measure of the capital goods industry. It is this industry which has suffered more than the consumer industries. Our most serious unemployment has occurred in fields related to construction.

It is for this reason that the Government has adopted its public works program and it is the realization of its importance which has caused the public works program to receive the active endorsement of outstanding thinkers and business leaders such as William Randolph Hearst. It has been estimated that construction and related enterprises account normally for about 30 per cent of the workers of this country.

In addition to its direct importance, construction, like advertising, is a reflection of community confidence in the future. Buildings, unlike clothes or food, are not consumed at once upon completion. They serve the future and it is confidence in that future which affects the volume of construction.

Another factor affecting the volume is the cost and relation of existing supply to current demand for space. It may be noted that construction costs show but a slight decline from the boom period and have made rapid progress in recovery during the past four months.

BOSTON SHARES ARE LIFTED

Leading shares were lifted 1 to more than 2 points in late trading on the Boston Stock Exchange today. Volume was heavier than in previous sessions of the week. Rail shares were featured with Atchison running up 2 points and Pennsylvania more than a point.

Boston & Albany, and Boston & Maine, prior preferred, each showed gains of a point. New Haven was a minor fraction higher. American Pneumatic issues were strong with both the first and second preferred showing gains of a point or better.

American Telephone and Edison Electric were fractionally improved while New England Telephone was steady around its previous closing price. General Electric converted an early rise into a slight loss. American Woolen common was down slightly, while the preferred jumped about 2 points.

Cotton Higher in New York Trading

New York, Nov. 24 (INS). Although called upon to absorb considerable liquidation of December of the last-minute variety, cotton futures today displayed a firm tone with prices about 25 cents a bale above the previous close. The market opened off 4 points to up 1 point and as pressure of sellers lightened, moved moderately higher.

Late prices were up 3 to 5 points with December up 3 at 10.86, January up 3 at 9.93, March up 3 at 10.10, May up 4 at 10.24, July up 3 at 10.37 and October up 3 at 10.54.

Live News of Active Leaders in Wall St.

WHILE some declared only inflation promises were holding the stock market up, others, who are retaining shares for the long pull, asserted they are quite justified by improving business and the increasing total of extra and increased dividends which it is believed [illegible] for months ahead.

Holiday Business Makes Itself Felt

Backing the bulls, holiday business is beginning to make itself strongly manifest in retail stores throughout the country and particularly in the metropolitan area. Some big store people believe the Christmas business this year will be one of the best since 1929.

Delaware & Hudson Expects Declines

Cash forecast for the Delaware & Hudson Railroad Corp. between Nov. 6, 1933, and March 31, 1934, shows that the carrier expects a progressively increasing deficit in its cash balance in each of the successive winter months ranging from $677 at the end of November to $2,987,239 at the end of March 1934.

Data were furnished to the I. C. C. in the road's application for authority to issue $12,500,000 of short term promissory notes.

Dividend Actions Affording Cheer

Possibly the best answer to whether this is going to be a profitless recovery lies in the recent record of corporate dividend disbursements. They indicate pretty clearly that so far at least stockholders of many companies have shared in the improvement in business through enhanced returns on their investments. Devoe & Raynolds was an example. Directors voted a regular payment of 25 cents on both the A and the B common. The last dividend on the common was paid April 1, 1932, so stockholders have some cause to be cheered at the resumption.

FEDERAL BOND MOVEMENT IS MADE STUDY

Sprague Action Not to Blame for the Drop, Declares Haney

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University.

New York, Nov. 24—As was sure to happen, the decline in government bonds is now being "explained" as due to malicious attacks made by enemies of the Treasury.

The old bogies of "short selling" and "bear raids" are being trotted out just as they were being liquidated.

Some margin power is alleged to be trying to "get" those who have been running the Treasury.

One sure thing is that Dr. Sprague's resignation is not responsible. This is obvious because bonds began to sell off right after Prof. Warren began to operate on the dollar. The President announced his policy Oct. 23. Then bonds began to slide.

That is just a plain fact of recent history. It does not take any expert to see when bonds turned weak and what happened just prior to their weakness.

Anyone can figure the thing out for himself. Government bonds are payable in dollars and are worth no more than dollars. The government first takes the dollar off the gold basis and then proceeds to reduce the value of the dollar. How, then, can we expect the value of government bonds to remain unchanged?

You can't expect the value of any dollar bond to stay up when you put the value of the dollar down. It is a plain fact that all high grade dollar bonds have been declining. The slump has not been confined to government bonds. Why is this? Are we to conclude that some big bears have been selling all bonds short?

And what is Prof. Warren doing but sell the dollar? Is he not a bear on the dollar? He has been forcing it lower and lower in terms of gold.

But dollars are just as much the obligations of the government as bonds are. They are in large part practically government notes.

The Civil War was paid for through public debt and greenbacks. Both depreciated greatly. Government 6s sold down to 83 in 1865.

Then wealthy people bought the bonds when they were low. Then the people were burdened with heavy taxes to make the bonds good. Then the bonds came back, and the buyers made big money.

Grains Run Higher and Then Sell Off

Chicago, Nov. 24—Wheat and corn advanced around a cent a bushel today in early trading here. A tumble of more than 1½ cents a bushel from early top figures for wheat followed selling that came largely from eastern sources. Purchasing enlarged on declines, and lifted prices again to around yesterday's close. On the transient decline May wheat touched the lowest point yet since Nov. 2.

Money Problem Leaves Traders Much Perplexed

By WALL ST. SPECTATOR

Wall st. traders, who usually just dote on things in which the element of mystery is present, are left all perplexed by the money problem. The more different views they read from so-called authorities, the deeper is the darkness that surrounds them.

This explains why so many are keeping to the sidelines, awaiting clarification.

One common view is that the President's gold-buying policy is a form of stabilization. Holders of this theory see the value of the dollar fixed over a range of about 10 cts. by adjustments of gold prices with the 60-ct. level in the forefront.

SOVIET REPORT HELPS MACK

Spectator learns that the run up in Mack Truck was tagged with the report that the company closed some fair-sized business with Russia.

United Fruit will raise the dividend from $2 to $3, it is said by those usually in the know.

The buying we have been hearing in the utilities is explained by their better appearance on charts. Still all that is expected is a technical rally in the group.

Spectator still can't see any more than a minor rally in the market unless the rails do things convincingly . . . There has been better buying in the tobaccos . . . Steels act as if they were under persistent accumulation. Experts predict a good first quarter for the industry, with operations well above 40 per cent.

A Wilson preferred dividend on account of accumulations is being talked about. Such action is possible since net is estimated around $15 a share, but not probable while the packers are battling the processing taxes. A new group is reported in Celanese. Illinois Central will show a loss of about 80 cents a share this year.

ANOTHER HALT IN GOLD RISE REGISTERED

By B. C. FORBES

New York, Nov. 24—The price of gold was not raised by Washington yesterday or today. Only twice since Tuesday of last week has the metal been marked up, and only a dime an ounce each time from $33.56 to $33.76.

B. C. Forbes

This encourages bankers, who almost unanimously oppose Washington's gold policy, to believe that the hubbub which is now being raised against further inflation is actually being heeded despite official assertions to the contrary.

The chorus against further depreciation of the dollar is being swelled daily, almost hourly. Yesterday the advisory council of the Federal Reserve board, consisting of well-known men from different sections of the country, issued an outspoken blast. It declared, among other things:

"As long as there is uncertainty in regard to the future value of the monetary unit, there can be no lasting or fundamental improvement in business."

It also warned that government securities might suffer.

The issue is clearly drawn. Bankers want stabilization; Washington prefers to keep on "cheapening" the dollar for the time being.

The currency warfare, naturally does not tend to inspire confidence. Securities weakened yesterday. So did various commodities.

Pessimism is more rampant at the top than lower down. Not only does retail trade hold up, but most Wall Street brokers are predicting higher stock prices. Here are the views of three firms quoted in an evening paper.

"The line of least resistance is upward."

"There is no reason to alter our view that stocks are a purchase both for near and long term."

"We think that within a reasonable length of time there will be a situation where increased funds will be devoted to the purchase of common stocks."

STOCKS HIGHER, WITH TRADING PACE SLOW

New York, Nov. 24—Prices for important shares were generally advanced in quiet trading on the New Yosk Stock Exchange today.

Emphasis was on the non-inflationasy stocks, reflecting tse further uprush in the dollar and strength in U. S. government bonds.

Utilities recovered from their long slump and moveh up 1 to 2 points led by Consolidated Gas. Later the rails weret aken in hand while industrials improved.

Mining stoiks were inclined to heaviness, though price changes were small, and the oils were about steady.

The whole market at times showed signs of moving forward, but was held back by sluggishness of commodities. Wheat rallied only slightly from yesterday's break and turned down later for a time. Cotton was firmer, but silver sold off.

The steels were held back by profit-taking after yesterday's late rally in them. Strength in the rails was aided by the rise in traffic last week. Loadings of revenue freight in the week ended November 18 totaled 599,289 cars, an increase of 21,613 cars over the preceding week, 26,666 cars over the same week in 1932 and 54,214 cars less than in the same week in 1931, according to American Railway Association.

Motors were moderately active and slightly higher with Chrysler in demand. Liquor shares rallied for the first time since the wave of selling swept them to new lows this week.

U. S. government bonds pushed to higher levels and thus widened their recovery since Wednesday to considerably more than a point in some of the Treasury issues. The upturn also contributed to a firmer tone in other groups.

In the first hour some active issues, under leadership of the public utilities, scored gains of a point or two. American Telephone, American Power & Light, American Water Works, Brooklyn Union Gas, Columbia Gas, Consolidated Gas, Electric Power & Light, National Power & Light, North American, Public Service of New Jersey and Standard Gas were 1 to more than 2 points higher.

U. S. Steel preferred was up over a point. National Steel gained a point. Homestake showed a gain of 3 points. Gains of 2 points or better were shown for Auburn and Industrial Rayon.

Point or better improvement came in American Can, American Commercial Alcohol, Celanese, Commericial Solvents, Lackawanna, Eastman, First National Stores, Johns Manville, Mack, National Distillers, New York Central and Union Pacific.

Sales to 11 a. m. approximated 430,000 shares.

In the second hour numerous gains of a point or better were held, while Homestake was up 3. Shares up a point or more included Union Pacific, United Aircraft, Southern Pacific, Pullman, North American, National Distillers, New York Central, American Woolen preferred, American Telephone, American Can, Atchison, Baltimore & Ohio, Columbia Gas, Consolidated Gas of New York, Delaware & Hudson and Eastman.

Public Service of New Jersey and Auburn Auto were up 2 or better.

Sales to noon approximated 670,000 shares.

In the third hour point or two gains predominated. Union Pacific was up over 2. International Harvester, Ingersoll Rand, Lackawanna, Commercial Solvents, Columbia Gas, American Power & Light, American Commercial Alcohol, American Water Works, Case and McKeesport were among numerous issues holding point or better advances.

Strength of the public utility shares, laid in part to short covering, was pronounced.

Sales to 1 p. m. approximated 790,000 shares.

Fourth hour prices were 1 to more than 2 points above previous closing prices. Eastman and Homestake Mining each moved up 3 points. Issues recording advances of 2 or more points included American Can, Auburn Auto, Consolidated Gas and Union Pacific.

U. S. Steel was only fractionally improved. Point or better gains were noted for du Pont, Atchison, Industrial Rayon, Macy, National Distillers, United Aircraft and Western Union.

Sales to 2 p. m. approximated 1,010,000 shares.

New York, Nov. 24—New securities listed on stock exchange in October, four in number, totaling $59,207,440, more than doubled the September listings of $26,144,140, three in number, and far exceeded the October, 1932, figure of $6,647,850, two in number. Bond listings were $13,992,000 in October, against none in September and October last year; stock comparison was $45,215,440 in October, $26,144,140 in September and $6,647,850 in October a year ago.

Socony Cuts "Gas" Price in Rochester

Standard Oil Co. of New York, Inc., has reduced gasoline prices in Rochester, N. Y., market one cent a gallon to meet competition. Move follows recent advance of three cents a gallon following the price-war there.

Maytag Plant Opens With Five-Day Week

Des Moines, Nov. 24—Maytag Co. plant at Newton has resumed on a five-day week. The company received orders averaging 1500 units a day the week preceding the reopening.

Lower Dollar Helps Export Business

Export business of National Bellas Hess, Inc., Kansas City and New York mail order house, which does business in twenty-two foreign countries, is materially benefiting from present conditions surrounding the dollar in foreign exchange markets, according to a statement made today by Carl D. Berry, president.

"Our sales volume in the British Indies and South American countries, where the pound sterling is the basis of exchange, especially has shown a sharp increase since the value of the dollar began to fail in exchange markets," Mr. Berry said. "Our average foreign order is now almost three times as large as our average domestic order. On November 15, National had the largest foreign sales of any day in the last year."

The recent cold spell which prevailed throughout the Middle West gave an impetus to the company's domestic business. Sales for the week ended November 18 were 60 per cent larger than for the comparable week in 1932, even though the company was enjoying improved business at that time as a result of a special circular which is not being used this year.

Paint Prices Put Higher

New York, Nov. 24—Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. announces, effective December 1, an increase in paint and varnish prices of slightly less than 10 per cent. The price of lacquer will remain unchanged. Glidden Co. will increase prices on paint in line with other companies an average of about 7 per cent, effective around December 1.

Sugar Plant to Shut Down

Philadelphia, Nov. 24—Franklin Sugar Refining Co. is to be shut down this week and will probably not resume melting for about four weeks. Continued increase in importations of refined sugar from Cuba and elsewhere have seriously affected company's business in this market, according to President Stubbs.

THE DOCTAH

MILWAUKEE—Using recently devised methods, Dr. A. S. Hyman, heart specialist, has permitted 100 persons of all faiths to become "legally, physically, biologically and medically dead." After their hearts ceased beating for more than a minute, he revived them, and to each he put the question: "What does it feel like to be dead?" In all cases the former "dead" individuals answered that they did not know they were dead and did not feel, hear or see anything. Dr. Hyman's report was made to the American Medical Association convention.

The Saloon Problem

Promises of Politicians

The Legislature of Massachusetts was called into special session by Governor Ely and it has been wrestling with a new system to control the traffic in alcoholic liquors.

The liquor traffic has been a source of annoyance and irritation throughout the centuries.

No system ever devised for its control has been completely satisfactory.

Every system ever devised has been flaunted and violated by the predatory interests that dominated the manufacture and sale of liquors.

We have swung from license to no-license, to constitutional prohibition and back to repeal in the hope of securing some system that might enable the public to control the traffic properly and that might promote temperance and sobriety while not depriving men of their natural liberties.

Two ugly causes have propelled us back and forth. One cause was the effort of the liquor interests to influence and corrupt the politics of city, State and Nation. The other was the vicious saloon, with the infamies and degradation resulting from it.

We are on the threshold of a new era again—of a new effort to bring the liquor traffic within bounds.

And we are met face to face in this new effort with the same old causes of most of our troubles in the past—the attempt of the ringsters to influence the new system of liquor regulation and the attempt to re-establish the outlawed saloon.

They would merely change the name of the sinkhouse of depravity. They would call it a "tavern."

The saloon was a place where a person stood up to get drunk. The "tavern" is a place where a person would sit down to get drunk. Being nearer to the floor, the person would probably drink more and get drunker and drunker.

For fourteen years the good people of this country had the promise dinned into their ears that they could vote for repeal of prohibition with the assurance that the old saloon was done forever and would not be re-established.

Now we see that their promises were not worth a scrap of paper.

As the Worcester Telegram well puts it:

"There is no question but that the tavern envisaged by the legislation now proposed in Massachusets is the old saloon under another name.

"If the proposed tavern is set up by law in Massachusets, it will mean that the saloon is back."

And the Telegram makes this pointed query:

"If, despite the countless promises to the contrary, the saloon is allowed to come back, what reliance can be placed in the promises of politicians?"

The answer to the question is evident. No reliance whatever could be placed upon the promises so solemnly made.

The plea that the needs of the workingman require a "tavern" or a saloon is utterly fictitious. The workingman does not need a place to get drunk in. The saloon would be saddled upon him as the means of procuring his pay envelope on Saturday night, to the consequent suffering of his family. Hotels and restaurants offer every opportunity for rich and poor alike who may want hard liquor.

The people of Massachusetts do not want "taverns" or saloons in which high alcoholic liquors would be dispensed, which would revive all the notorious evils of the past and set back the cause of temperance another generation.

Recognition of Russia

On the initiative of President Roosevelt the United States and Russia have at last resumed normal relations on terms that are entirely honorable, mutually advantageous and in harmony with "a happy tradition of friendship" which existed between these two great peoples for more than a century.

Russia promises "to respect scrupulously the indisputable right of the United States to order its own life within its own jurisdiction in its own way."

This means that Russia will neither disseminate Communist propaganda in this country nor engage in any other form of revolutionary activity on American soil against the Government and institutions of the United States.

Americans resident in Russia are assured of freedom of worship, including religious services in English or any other language, in churches of their own leasing or construction.

Under a consular convention to be negotiated immediately American citizens will enjoy all the rights of protection now given by Russia to the nationals of other countries.

Pending a final settlement of all outstanding claims and counterclaims by the customary processes of friendly diplomacy, the Russian Government will not prosecute any claims against American citizens and permanently waives all claims growing out of the American military expedition to Siberia in 1918.

These agreements lay firm the foundation for a hearty co-operation between the United States and Russia in the support of common causes, including the promotion of the peace of the world.

In the light of these agreements it cannot be truthfully said that a desire for trade was the main purpose of the conversations between President Roosevelt and Mr. Litvinoff which have come to such a successful conclusion.

Nevertheless, as the Hearst newspapers in their long advocacy of the restoration of friendly relations with Russia have repeatedly pointed out, friendly political relations promote trade relations, and trade relations, when maintained on a fair basis, promote friendly political relations.

Consequently the return of Russo-American relations to normal should mean the revival of a commerce between Russia and the United States that will greatly benefit both countries and strengthen the ties that bind the two peoples in the same powerful friendship which they once were proud to claim and with renewed pride can now claim again.

Silhouettes

Claiming the credit for Prohibition repeal isn't a circumstance to what claiming the credit for the return of prosperity is going to be one of these days. Why, even the NRA will probably try to grab it.

* * *

The new code for pressing a suit of clothes goes into effect and we understand that General Hugh Johnson regards the man who sleeps with his pants under the mattress as a chiseler.

We understand from our secret agents that recognition of Russia was held up temporarily by a mere detail as to the amount of vodka, caviar and samovars the United States will import per annum.

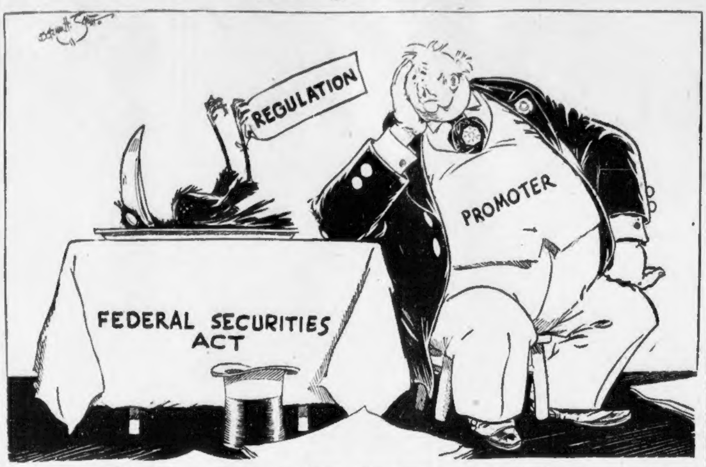
A Change of Diet



Josh Billingss said, "I kin eat crow, but I don't hanker arter it!"

The gentleman in this picture doesn't like crow, either—not after the rich diet he enjoyed during the fat years of prosperity.

But when the lean years came on it became evident that the promoters and some other varieties of "financier" had much to do with wrecking our prosperity—and Congress wisely enacted the Federal Securities Act to restrain them.

So if the promoter types of citizen have to eat crow now they brought it on themselves.

Indications have been growing lately that when Congress convenes efforts will be made to get rid of the Federal Securities Act and its crow diet for exploiters.

The law may need some revision—but the public will not stand for its repeal.

Hollywood After Runyon

O. O. McIntyre

New York, Nov. 24—Thoughts while strolling: They say Mencken and Nathan will tie up in a new magazine venture. Who remembers when it was an oyster plant? Lily Pons has a skip to her walk like her name—lilypons! What's become of Vincent Lopez? Hollywood studios clamor for Damon Runyon.

One of my favorite people—Fred Drake. The Filipino leader, Manuel Quezon, suggests a shrunk Sam Shipman. Dick Hyland's studious expression. And Tallulah Bankhead suggests a statue in chalk these days. What a queenly looking lady Mary Roberts Rhinehart is! Also Mrs. Dana Gibson.

Somehow I'd like to see Owen Young leap-frog over a fire plug. It would do him good. The Ritz starters never change. Colin Clive, the actor, is a startling ringer for Jimmy Walker. What will become of peep-holes in speakeasies? Those Rialto doctors at every opening—Wagner and Michel.

Fred C. Kelley, a Xenia, O., boy, who made good in the city. Odd how minestrone is always served in a battered tureen. Eddie Duchin is the town's best blusher. That unroused detachment of Brock Pemberton. There's a giddyap to those jockey cap hats the ladies wear all right, all right!

One word description of Fred Allen—raspy. No person looks so unlike his photographs as Albert Wiggin. Louis Calhern and beautiful bride. Mary Pickford still excites the populace more than any other movie star. Forlorn oldtimers around the Palace corner. What was it about variety that made us love it so?

Hoofing has recruited some of the best box office stars in the movies. Valentino, of course, was the most notable garniture. But there are also such feather-footed figures as Barbara Stanwyck, George Raft, Ginger Rogers, Ruby Keeler, James Cagney and Joan Crawford who began as fast steppers—mostly in Broadway night clubs.

The original Algonquin crowd was not the moderns who glorified the Round Table. The first of the literary minded to make the West 44th st. inn their luncheon place was headed by the then youthful and irrepressible Booth Tarkington. In the very select circle, too, were George Ade, "Stuffy" Davis, Ort Wells, Harry Leon Wilson and the actor Roy Atwell.

There was a memorable night when Tarkington, zooming out of the Indiana corn belt, was given a celebration lasting from 4 one afternoon until the same hour the next. Then his cronies escorted him to the Algonquin and, to be certain he remained there, sequestered the clothes he wore. But two hours later "Tark" appeared at the Lambs, merry and bright, in fur coat, high hat and bedroom slippers. When the room became a little too stuffy he doffed his great coat and revealed himself in an old-fashioned night gown.

During this Roman Holiday Roy Atwell complained to Tarkington he had been unable to see "Havana," a hit at the Casino. As they moved in a devious but enchantng itinerary from this cafe to that he kept grumbling: "I want to go to 'Havana.'" It became so tiresome that one morning after a night of wassail and continued complaining Atwell awakened on a rolling boat—actually bound for the city of Havana. Without a sou!

Only one stage box in New York was ever denied the public. This was an upper tier at the New Amsterdam for A. L. Erlanger and friends. Erlanger finally abandoned the idea. But in the old Euclid Opera House in Cleveland box A remained inviolate from time the theater was built until torn down. It was for the political leader Mark Hanna and at death passed to his son.

There's a glowy upshoot in the doughnut and coffee shop at 45th and Broadway. When opened three years ago I thought, en passant, how foolish! The rental there is about the highest on Broadway. But I notice they have taken the second floor and the manager tells me he feeds coffee and crullers to 4000 a day. Faith in an idea!

Memory of the stern rebukes my doughnut dunking received in formative days has left an ineradicable scar. To this day when I duck into what Wilson Mizner called a sinker salon I have an uneasy feeling of being followed. And at the first dunk expect somebody to scream, "Don't do that!"

More Mean Thoughts on Football

Elsie Robinson

THE KIDS are mad at me. They're mad at me because I wrote an article about football.

Nothing wrong with football itself. Only why go ga-ga over it? Other nations liked sports, too. English, French, German, Italian, Russian students went in for sports. But they also learned other things—got excited about other things. Their country, for instance. What was happening to their country. But how much did the average American youngster know or care about politics?

OLD BOYS WORSE

And the Old Boys were worse. Might be some excuse for a kid. But when a whole nation goes oskey-wow-wow and throws its beanie in the air . . . !!!

So I asked for opinions. And got them. The facts being 36,524 to 1 that I was cuckoo. And oughta be canned.

So, of course, there is only one thing for me to do. Meaning what? Stand up and say I'm sorry? Not on your life! Stand up and say I'm right! I suspected it before. Now I know it. And this being open season for Big Noises, I'm going to register mine all over again—with additions.

Starting once more from the scratch—I'm for football. I go to football games when I have time. There's no argument; sports should be a part of our school programs. But they should be a MINOR part. Are we educating our youngsters? Or are we just exercising them? And after college, what? Do we grow up, or don't we?

Particularly, in a year like this—with dreadful millions on the verge of starvation and the government facing the grimmest crisis in our history—should we, or shouldn't we, cut out the rah-rahs and get down to business?

All right—all right—I know what you're going to say. You're going to point out how rich and powerful we Americans are, and how we need football to rest our mammoth brains.

All of which listens lovely. And I certainly wish it were so. But it isn't.

SIMPLE TRUTH

The simple, nasty truth is, we Americans aren't rich and powerful. A few of us—to be exact, the one per cent who own over 90 per cent of the cash—are sitting swell. But the rest of us are in a terrible hole. And as for our mammoth brains—if they were really mammoth, we wouldn't be in that hole.

Why are we in it? We're in it because we stayed ga-ga instead of growing up. We were born sitting pretty—and thinking we were so smart that we didn't need to get any smarter. So we let our youngsters go on being Kiddies until after they were College Grads, and we went around acting like a lot of Cut-ups ourselves. With the natural consequence that—

WE BECAME THE WORLD'S RECORD BUNCH OF HALF-BAKED SAPS AND SUCKERS, AND THE REALLY SMART BOYS TOOK US FOR A RIDE!

All of which would have been impossible if we had known what we, and our world, were all about. But until the last four years you could put what the average American voter knew, or wanted to know, about the Status Quo, in a very small pig's eye.

Occasionally we got a little excited about some local politics, and we could always come home and tell what The Boss said about Those Fellows in Washington. But we had no real information or interest. And we didn't feel that we needed either.

Then along came the depression with its radio broadcasts, and we got wised-up and burned-up, willy nilly. Now even the dumbest of us know we've been done dirt—and even the stubbornest of us are beginning to admit that maybe it was our own fault.

So what? Are we at last going to grow up? And run our nation to suit ourselves? Maybe! But we won't until we discover that there are several things more important than football scores—and then break the news to the kid.

TAKE IT—LEAVE IT!

Does that mean that you should turn in your season's tickets? It certainly doesn't. I'm going to a game myself next Saturday, if I can slip it over on my boss. And I advise you to do the same.

But for the luvva Mike, take it—then leave it! You're a Big Boy now. Act it when you leave the grandstand. Just because the kids dress up that way, must Uncle Sam go round in padded panties? Look what happened to him because he did!

Just Folks

I Acknowledge a Gift

"A gift for you," my darling said,
"From Sis and Bess and Flo.
A present tied with ribbon red
Their love for you to show."
My strange surprise I can't begin
Sufficiently to tell.
I oped the box and found within
A blue nightgown for Nell!

"I thought the gift was mine," said I,
When speech again began.
She answered: "It's so hard to buy
A present for a man!
The girls decided after all
That happier you'd be
If they should make their token small
A blue nightgown for me."

Had I the words of Shakespeare wise,
The genius of Shelley,
Some fitting tribute I'd devise
To that nightgown for Nellie.
I'd sing of lovely women three
Who would a man delight
And bought for him a drapery
His wife could wear at night.

Oh, gifts with her I've shared before,
Since good friends oft must choose;
Hand-painted barriers for the door
And things we both could use.
Grateful for years I've had to be
For cakes and Christmas jelly;
But now the girls have given to me
A blue nightgown for Nellie!

U. S. Aims Knockout Blow At Racketeering

By James T. Williams, Jr.

Ways and means of delivering against the crime of racketeering a knockout blow are the subject of serious study today by the executive and legislative branches of the federal government.

By direction of the President, Atty.-Gen. Cummings will soon submit recommendations to Mr. Roosevelt for an aggressive warfare against racketeering to be waged under federal leadership supported by co-operation of the several states.

These recommendations will be based upon a study of the causes of racketeering made by Prof. Raymond Moley, who, as a member of governmental crime commissions in Ohio and New York gains a thorough knowledge of the problem.

By direction of the Senate a subcommittee on commerce, headed by Senator Copeland of New York, will soon conclude a series of hearings begun in the summer at which a mass of evidence has been developed regarding organized crime, including racketeering.

The report the Copeland committee and the report of Mr. Cummings will be completed in time, it is hoped, for the President to make his recommendations to Congress regarding new national measures for dealing with crime in the light of the facts which these reports will set forth.

AIMS AT RACKETEERS

Meantime, President Roosevelt has approved a code of fair competition for the cleaning and dyeing trade which contains several provisions aimed at racketeering in that industry.

These provisions pledge the industry to refrain from:

"Any use of violence to persons or property, intimidation or unlawful coercion by a member of the trade against a member of the trade.

"Any threat by a member of the trade to use such violence, intimidation or unlawful coercion.

"Any conspiracy among members of the trade or among members of the trade and others to use or to threaten to use such violence, intimidation or unlawful coercion.

"Any combining or co-operation by members of the trade with anyone who is using or threatening to use such violence, intimidation or unlawful coercion."

But other trades in which racketeers are active have yet to include in their codes the anti-racketeering provisions which are a feature of the code for the cleaning and dyeing trade.

Investigations of the rise of commercial racketeering show that, "The essence of the racket is not the use of violence." It is, "the threat of violence resulting in the payment of money." This was one of the conclusions in the report on the cost of crime submitted by the national commission on law observance and enforcement several years ago.

HOW IT WORKS

Its investigation of racketeering was made under the direction of two able and experienced members of the New York Bar—Goldwaithe H. Dorr and Sidney P. Simpson. They found that "the means employed to keep the immediate victims of the racket in line involved all sorts of crimes of violence, ranging from murder, arson and dynamiting to petty malicious mischief."

The most successful rackets, as these investigators discovered, are those "which employ violence the least because tribute is forthcoming without its employment."

What the successful racketeer does first is thoroughly to "organize" the business. To do this the racketeer compels all those engaged in the business he is "organizing" to "pay tribute under threat of having their shops blown up, their property destroyed and their lives and bodily safety endangered."

It is doubtful whether any code will be effective in finally disposing of criminals so cowardly and contemptible as is the typical racketeer. In any case, code provisions aimed at racketeering to be effective will have to be supported by sterner measures on the part of organized government. If these measures include immediate deportation of alien racketeers and swift and drastic punishment of domestic racketeers, the business of racketeering will soon be forced into bankruptcy.

"New Deal" Starts Rebuilding of U. S. Navy—Aircraft Carriers, Subs Provide Much Work

By Edwin C. Hill

Copyright, 1933, King Features Synd., Inc.

One of the most satisfactory and reassuring activities of the "New Deal" is the upbuilding of the United States Navy. Once more, under another Roosevelt, we are launched on a new building program which will strengthen the navy in aircraft-carriers, cruisers, destroyers and submarines, and provide, as well, employment to many thousands.

It is certainly a heartening fact that the men upon whose shoulders, mainly, rests the welfare of the institution upon which the safety of this country most literally depends, so clearly perceive the modern necessity for a strong American navy. Neither the President nor Secretary Swanson fails to perceive the fact that we are living in a disordered world; a world in which the United States has scarcely a real friend. They realize that the United States, without a strong navy, would be helpless, even as a neutral power, with other countries at war.

SHIPS HALTED

Without a Navy, and a strong Navy that other sea powers would respect, American commerce could scarcely move upon the seas. American ships would be halted in their courses, forbidden to enter this port or that; stopped and searched at will; confiscated at a whim. American commerce and the industry behind the commerce would be paralyzed, and millions who never saw a ship or the sea would lose employment and suffer from lack of the very necessaries of life.

That is what a great Navy means to us, even in peace, when we are at peace with the rest of the world.

Would that the world were ruled differently; that war would never come again; that the merchant vessels of peace could make their way across the seven seas at all times without let or hindrance. But we are not living in that kind of world, and five hundred years to come or a thousand will not see that kind of world; will not see it until all national ambitions are abolished and commercial rivalries eliminated; cannot see it, unless mankind reverts to an almost purely agricultural existence, with life self-contained within the boundaries of every country.

HOT COMPETITION

For the industrial age, the machine age, means hot competition for world markets. And hot competition for world markets invariably bring on, as the most natural consequence, embittered rivalries, and such rivalries lead to armed conflicts. And even if our country remains firmly at peace, declining to lean to one side or another in any future war, we cannot escape humiliation and material loss and being dragged into war unless we have a navy that will keep warring nations from doing as they please with our vessels of commerce.

There can be scarcely any question that the United States Navy has kept us out of more wars than ever it fought in. One need not go back a great way in our national history. Immediately after the Civil War ended, when France, under Napoleon the Third, had set up an world empire in Mexico under Maximilian and Carolotta, war between France and the United States would almost certainly have occurred had not the French Emperor known he could not land his armies of Frenchmen through the barrier which Farragut and Porter would have set up in the Gulf of Mexico.

There was a day in Manila Bay when Admiral Dewey, forging ahead to attack the Spanish fleet, found himself in range of the menacing guns of Von Diederich's German squadron. But Von Diederich did not dare to plant himself in George Dewey's path. And a little later on, when the Kaiser threatened to send a fleet against Venezuela, President Theodore Roosevelt sent for Von Holleben, the German ambassador, and told him in blunt language that if the German fleet sailed, Admiral Dewey would be ordered to the coast of Venezuela with ships cleared for action.

WAR CLOSER

And still later, when the Japanese people and government were burning with resentment against the exclusion of Japanese immigrants from California, when war was closer than more than a very few people knew, it was the same Theodore Roosevelt who ordered the United States battle-fleet around the world so that the Japanese might have time to visualize the might they were challenging before they took the irrevocable step.

There were tense days, too, in the early part of the Great War, when, caught as a neutral between the clashing forces of the British and the Germans, only the power of our Navy saved us from the deepest humiliation.

Thieves and thugs and holdup men are great for disarmament—for disarmament of the peaceful citizen. And I'm afraid there is a kind of analogy in international relations. European countries, and at least one Far Eastern power, would dearly love to see the United States let its Navy dwindle down to a few antiquated battleships and a few wornout destroyers and submarines.

Unless our modern civilization can fundamentally be changed, unless the commercial rivalries of industrial nations can be utterly eliminated, until, indeed, humanity can go back to the ancient, simple, agricultural existence of some hundreds of years ago, navies will continue to ride the seas. The question is, simply, whether we, a rich, envied and pretty thoroughly disliked people, can afford to let lapse our only dependable insurance for peace and security, in a world where human nature changeth not, and will not this side of the millenium.
